UNANSWERABLE ARGUMENT.

The following extract from the speech delivered by Mr. Carlisle before the democratic convention that renominated him for Congress a few days ago presents arguments in favor of tariff reduction that are simply unanswerable:

"I have said, gentlemen, that the system of taxation is continued on the ground that it increased the rates of wages of the American laborer. There are two or three facts which show conclusively that this argument is not sound. In the first place, it is a conceded fact that there is as much difference between the rates of wages paid in this country to laborers engaged in the same occupation in different parts of the country as there is between the difference of the average rate of wages paid here and in European countries, and yet the same tariff law prevails throughout the whole United States. [Applause.]

"You will find by an examination of the labor statistics that from fifty to sixty and in some cases even as high as one hundred per cent more is paid for labor in the same occupation in Chicago than is paid in New York or Philadelphia. If the tariff regulated wages I submit that the rates of wages would be the same, would be uniform in the same occupations, throughout the United States under the same tariff. [Applause.] Another fact is that the greatest difference between the rates of wages paid here and the rates paid in European countries is found in those occupations which nobody pretends can be protected under the tariff laws. For instance, there is a far greater difference between the rates of wages paid here to carpenters, plasterers, painters, stone and brick masons, teamsters, railroad employes, steamboat employes and the rates of wages paid the same classes of workmen in Europe than there is between the rates of wages here in your mills and cotton factories and the rates of wages paid in the same industries in Europe. The rates of wages paid in this country, too, in the unprotected industries are larger on the average than the rates of wages paid in this country in the protected industries, and the difference between them, in the one case, and those paid in Europe, in the other case, is still plainer, much plainer.

"Another fact is that since 1846, when the English corn laws were repealed and England entered on what our republican friends call free trade, the rates of wages have increased from 50 to 75 and even as high as 100 per cent in some occupations. Can we trace that increase in this country during the same time? Another fact is that the rates of wages in the mechanical and manufacturing industries of the United States increased far more during what is called the free trade period—from 1850 to 1860—than they have ever since that time. [Cheers.]

From 1850 to 1860, when we had low tariff, our manufacturing and mechanical industries prospered as never before, and not only that, but the great agricultural interests of the country, which we all know is the only safe and sure foundation for its prosperity and its purity, prospered along with them.

"The farmer, the agricultural laborer, is the man who suffers most under the system. Mr. Frye, of Maine, a distinguished member of the United States Senate, a particular friend of Mr. Blaine, made a speech in that body on the 23rd of last January in which he said he had reason to believe, after making a personal investigation of this question of labor and prices of commodities, that bacon and pork, beef, flour, butter and cheese were as cheap in this country as they were in Europe. That is to say, the commodities which the farmer produces and is compelled to sell are as cheap here as they are in the pauper labor countries of Europe. This is the testimony of a republican Senator given in the United States Senate after a personal visit to Europe. But how is it with the things which the farmer is compelled to buy? Are they as cheap here as in Europe? No. You are subjected upon every one of them, if they are imported, to an average tax of 47 to 10 per cent, and on the rest the manufacturer has the opportunity to add the same per centage to his price, and in many cases he does it in the name of American labor, professedly in the interest of American industry, and to promote the good of the American people, because, he says, that you must encourage these industries, and give employment to as many laborers as possible."

The Democratic party has a leader worthy of the grand record and traditions, and one whose banner points straight onward to a glorious victory. The ranks are closed up, and the onward march is taken up with fresh vigor that will end only when the polls close on the evening of Nov. 6th.

MORE "INADVERTENCE."

When a paper clips an editorial from another and publishes it as an original "ed," it should first glance over the article and see to all mistakes. The Albany Herald of last Saturday has for its leading editorial an article taken from the Irish (N. Y.) Word, of Sept 15; and it says that "Oregon gave Cleveland a majority of 2,250 in 1884." This is a mistake. Oregon elected the three Blaine electors in 1884. Sharpen your scissors, Mr. Herald Ours are.—Corvallis Gazette.

The greatest Democratic meeting in Kentucky since the days of Henry Clay was held the 19th inst. at Erlanger, across the river from Cincinnati. More than twenty thousand people attended. Twenty oxen, 40 Scotchdown sheep and 150 lambs were roasted and eaten and 1,000 gallons of burgoo were dished out. Burgoo is a soup or a broth known only to Kentucky. Senator Joe Blackburn talked of the doings of the Republican party. The tariff was left for Speaker Carlisle. The Speaker aroused unbounded enthusiasm. He was accompanied by his wife and he made a very brilliant speech. The barbecue began early this morning and did not end until night.

The cotton crop of the United States for the year ended September 1, 1888, as compiled by the Financial Chronicle, amounted to 7,017,707 bales, against 6,513,662 bales in 1887; and 6,550,215 bales for 1886. Of the crop of 1888 there was exported 4,638,981 bales, while spinners took 2,230,294 bales, leaving a stock on hand of 181,225 bales. The largest previous crop was that of 1882-'83, which amounted to 6,992,230 bales.

WHERE TO GO.

An Important Question.

Some will say to the grand old ocean at Newport; some to breezy Ilwaco; some to the health giving Springs at Sodaville and Waterloo, and some to where the deer graze in the mountains; but the general verdict will be, when you are after dry goods, boots, shoes, clothing, furnishing goods, etc., to go to A. B. Mellwain's, Albany, Or. After the most bountiful harvest in the history of Oregon the question is a very important one. Big crops with low prices and good goods will make things flourish. If you would realize this combination call on Mr. Mellwain and you will be taken through his large double store and be shown goods and prices that will impress this fact on your mind. His stock of dry goods is complete and selected to meet the demands of this growing community. In dress goods of all kinds he has a stock that speaks for itself. New designs, styles and patterns. His line of woolen goods is remarkably fine, and as fall is now here, deserves your consideration. Superior goods at low prices is the program. His stock of flannels is a good one and now is the time to buy. In ladies' shoes he can surprise you at their cheapness considering the quality of the article. You will not lose anything by examining his boot and shoe stock generally. Mr. Mellwain's clothing and furnishing goods department is well stocked with a good assortment of goods which he is selling at very low prices.

Mr. Mellwain's goods generally have been bought under the market, and hence can be sold at prices that defy competition. Farmers, laboring men, mechanics, men, women and children should inspect his large assortment of goods, as it will be business for them to do so. A dollar saved is a dollar earned as much now as ever, and Mr. Mellwain proposes to help you do this by giving you the prices and goods.

Large crops and high prices for wheat in order to make prosperous times should be followed by close buying in the best market, hence it will be to your advantage to call on A. B. Mellwain who has the goods and prices to give you bargains such as cannot be obtained elsewhere.

CLOTHING.—A large and complete line of gents' clothing and furnishing goods at A. B. Mellwain's. In the clothing department he has a large line of pants, regular value, $5, which he will sell during the coming week for $2.50.
