Our American Empire.

The Oregonian and other supporters of McKinley imperialism take much delight in quoting Chief Justice Marshall as calling the United States the "American Empire," doing so for the purpose of justifying McKinley in his attempt to establish an empire on the ruins of other public.

But what did Justice Marshall say? Speaking with reference to the District of Columbia and denouncing the constitutional grant of power to Congress "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises," (the same grant of power involved in the case lately decided by the Supreme court.) Chief Justice Marshall said:

"This grant is general without limitation as to place. It consequently extends to all places over which the government extends. If this could be doubted, the doubt is removed by the subsequent words which modify the grant. These words are, 'But all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.'"

"It will not be contended that the modification of the power extends to places to which the power itself does not extend. 'The power then to lay and collect duties, imposts and excises may be exercised and must be exercised throughout the United States.'"

"Does this term designate the whole or any particular portion of the American empire? Certainly this question can but admit of one answer. It is the name given to our great republic which is composed of States and territories. The District of Columbia, or the territory west of the Missouri is not less within the United States than Maryland or Pennsylvania; and it is not less necessary on the principles of our Constitution that uniformity in the imposition of imposing duties and excises should be observed in one than in the other. Since, then, the power to lay and collect taxes, which includes direct taxes, is obviously co-extensive with the power to lay and collect duties, imposts and excises, and since the latter extends throughout the United States, it follows that the power to impose direct taxes also extends throughout the United States."

It is very apparent from this that when the Chief Justice used the words, "American empire" he had in mind the vast extent of our country, including both states and territories; and not the character of our government. It is only those who seek to assist in establishing an empire here on the ruins of our republic that would thus willfully deceive the people.

The Supreme court has only such power and jurisdiction as the Constitution of the United States and the laws passed in pursuance thereof confer upon it. How, then, can that august tribunal pass upon the powers of congress for the purpose of governing the Philippine islands? It can not do so, for it has already decided that the power of congress to govern the islands is not conferred by the constitution but comes from outside of that document. This, then makes our government imperialistic in the worst and most hateful form, for congress is absolute in its power and there is no appeal from its vicious exercise. Men everywhere should pause in the support of that policy of McKinley which seeks to permanently fix that imperial policy upon our people.

Expansion Results.

Washington, June 6.—The worst thing about expansion, in the opinion of many level-headed men, is not that the United States will have to govern, "outside the Constitution," certain outlying territory already acquired from Spain, but that it will be tempted to go further and stir up strife for the purpose of gaining more land. This tendency is illustrated by a recent interview given out here by Representative Boutell, of Chicago, who not only declares in favor of keeping what we have but urges the acquisition of Canada, Mexico, the West Indies and Central America down to the line of the Nicaragua canal.

This is "manifest destiny" with a vengeance and can hardly be expected to conduce to the continuance of good relations with our already suspicious Spanish-American neighbors, whose good will is necessary to prevent the incursion of Europe into that part of the world. The worst of it is that Mr. Boutell has always been considered a very level-headed man, not at all a firebrand, and his words may be taken as representative of a large and tolerably conservative section of the republican party. He said:

"In my opinion there is only one logical conclusion regarding the ultimate course of events in the island of Cuba. The time will come, and it will not be long, before Cuba will be a part of the United States. The wisest minds of the past have been predicting such an outcome, holding that it will eventually be necessary for this country to absorb the island, and I must say that I fully concur in that opinion. Indeed I go a little farther. I think that in time the whole of the West India islands will become ours and that within fifty years the United States will be exercising its sovereignty over every acre of territory down to the Nicaragua canal, which waterway will have been completed by then. Upon the North I include Canada. This combination is bound to come, I believe, and the United States will have so expanded in a commercial and industrial sense by that time that the absorption of so much territory will be a justifiable policy."

Mr. Boutell believes that if civil government is established in the Philippines on July 1, as is now contemplated, without a call for an extra session of Congress to enact some measure prescribing a specific schedule of tariff rates, all duties collected on merchandise from the archipelago between the first of next month and the date upon which Congress finally passes such an act must be refunded.

As a matter of fact, the President has come to his peculiar position in regard to the rights in the Philippines, by violating the Spooner law. "The departure from right principles" in the first instance, according to some critics, has led to endless entangling contradictions, and to save itself from a present dilemma the Administration is compelled to discredit the Spanish title to the Philippines conveyed to the United States. By placing a cloud upon the Spanish title and questioning the exact validity of the conveyance, a distinction is made between "cession" and "possession" and the war power is established as a warrant for Executive authority, independently of the Spooner law. The idea that a civil government can rule by military law is surely one of the most peculiar that any Attorney-General ever held. C. M.
