That Automobile Accident.

EDITOR DEMOCRAT:

I wish to inform the public in regard to the McElmurry accident that it happened through their own carelessness. They made a big stew and said they would make us pay $50 damages, but when Mr. McElmurry got the straight of things from Mrs. Bruckman he changed his mind, from appearances of things, as I did not see him myself. Some people think a person has no right on earth. We all have the same privilege on the public highway and I am as careful as any one can be to avoid accidents. I make my living with the auto, as I am not able to do hard work and I am entitled to an honest living the same as any one else. The majority of people know that the automobile has come to stay the same as bicycles and want their horses to get used to them. Some people blame me for reckless driving, that was not me. But there are several other machines which look very similar to mine and those fellows told me of some of their freaks and I get the blame. I always stop in plenty of time when necessary, especially for ladies and children, and lead the teams by for those that wish me to.

Slate Agt. Henkle Decided.

The supreme court yesterday handed down a decision which has excited condown a decision which has excited considerable interest among the legal fraternity here. The case of Porter Slate respondent, agt. J. E. Henkle administrator of the estate of Francis Slate deceased, appellant, was decided in favor of the appellant, the decision of Judge Boise being ordered reversed.

J. E. Henkle as administrator sued Porter Slate, son of the deceased, for $600 for use of the property of the estate, and $230.70 for certain personal property. Slate filed a cross bill setting up a number of claims, which were allowed by Judge Boise in his decision. Under this decision the cross bill is dismissed. It is understood that this will send the case into Judge Burnett's department for trial of the facts for the recovery of the $600 and $230.70. L. L. Swann and W. R. Bilyeu appeared for Henkle and J. J. Whitney and J. R. Wyatt for Slate.
