The Surveyor Got Left.

Last Tuesday Judge Stewart received by express a fine lot of trout, and the shipping tag showed that they had been sent by Ed. Simmons, one of forest rangers, whose beat is along the summit of the Cascades from Fish Lake to Mt. Jefferson. The fish were magnificent specimens of lake trout, and the Judge and his family, having decided to remain at home on the Fourth, lived high and by the morning of the 5th the fish had all disappeared. On opening his mail yesterday morning he received the following postal: "Dear Friend: I send you by express a few Marion Lake trout, which you will please divide with County Surveyor Fisher."
When you meet Hugh Fisher dont say "fish" to him, for he has "blood in his neck" if he has no trout in his stomach.

C. & E. EXTENSION.

An Eastern Oregon Report.

The Bend Bulletin: E. H. Dunham, who was superintendent of the Old Oregon Pacific railroad (now the Corvallis & Eastern), arrived in Bend Wednesday with his son, looking over the country with a view to making investments and engaging in business at some favorable point. Mr. Dunham comes from Ashland, where he has been residing for several years. He says he knows Mr. Hammond's engineer has received orders to prepare for a journey along the projected line of the Corvallis & Eastern in Eastern Oregon. Mr. Hammond is expected to accompany the engineer, though that is not yet entirely certain. He wrote W. E. Guerin, Jr., several weeks ago that he intended to visit Bend this summer.
Mr. Dunham says he knows preparations for an extension of the Corvallis & Eastern line this year, are now practically matured, though he does not know how much of an extension is contemplated. He believes considerable property in this region is now held in the interest of A. B. Hammond and that the Corvallis & Eastern will surely be extended to give this property a coast outlet.
It is generally understood that Mr. Hammond's profits do not come from railroad earnings directly, but rather from the business of his own along the line upon which he is able to control rates. And his interests in this section are said to be large enough to warrant the building of a railroad seventy miles to protect them.

Death of Mrs. Matilda Churchill.

Mrs. Matilda Churchill died at Eugene last night at the age of 76 years. She was a pioneer of 1851, a splendid pioneer woman, beloved by a large number of relatives and friends. A Woman Hurt, Horse Killed.

During the races yesterday afternoon Mrs. Clarence Ireland, of Corvallis, was standing in her buggy watching the contests when her horse became frightened and ran, throwing her out on the ground, and running directly into the dray team of Elliff & Snow, standing between the grand stand and the sheds, the shaft striking a glancing blow, going into one of the horses, causing injuries from which the horse died this morning. Mrs. Ireland was bruised some but not seriously injured.

Mr. Wallace Baldwin, a resident of Albany for several years, being secretary of the water works, is now visiting Corvallis friends. For nine years he has been working for Hatch Bros., in their line of steamers betw en San Francisco and Vallejo.
