AN ALBANY STUDENT

Stood at the head of the Class.

Portland Journal:

An Albany college graduate was entering Rush Medical college two years ago. "It's unfortunate, Wallace, that you haven't had better preparation—such as you'd get in a large school," said the dean.

Two years passed. The dean called Wallace into his office. "You're to appear on the commencement platform and receive the sophomore honors," said the dean. And Wallace (Russell Wallace of Albany) asked the dean to recall a former prize-winner at Rush Medical and another brilliant student—both from Albany college.

"How about our preparation, doctor?" "It must have been good," announced the dean.

A small college is, like a small bank, frequently safer and better because it is small. The college should be small enough to do its very best for every individual. Books, buildings, equipment—all are well; it is personality, however, that educates, and personality is felt where intimacy exists.

Albany college has a good faculty of a dozen men and women. Collegiate, normal, commercial, academic and musical courses are offered.

A new conservatory of music is to be installed this year. Music has formerly been taught, but not so completely or with such good plans as it is to be henceforth.

E. Sox, and the case was set for Monday at 9 a. m. when it will be defended, the charges against the boy being denied.

C. H. NEWS.

While the county judge has authority to marry people he has no jurisdiction at all in divorce cases. Nevertheless Judge Stewart has numerous requests for divorce, and for the settlement of family troubles, and he always does his best to fix things up. One just received from a neighboring town tells of twenty-four years of married life, for a few years "a hell on earth." They have three children, but the mother never wanted any, and therein is the trouble.

TUESDAY.

DAGO STABBED

In a Quarrel Near Shedd on the R. R.

Two Italians doing special work with a gang on the S. P., near Shedd, this morning, under Foreman Ed Dooley, of this city, got into trouble this morning over something of no importance, and one of them drew a knife and proceeded to slash his companion, cutting a deep hole in his abdomen, several inches long.

Foreman Dooley and two or three Italians brought the man, Miss Campanella, to this city, and he was placed in St. Mary's Hospital, where Dr. Kavanaugh dressed his wound, and he is getting along well, not being considered in danger.

It was at first the intention to have Dominic Sculara, the man who did the stabbing, arrested, but after consultation the Italians refused to swear to a warrant, and agreed to pay all the expenses of the affair. Their version was that trouble arose between Campanella and Tony Sculara, a brother of Dominic, over the handling of a rail, when Campanella took Tony up and mashed him down on the track, then Dominic took the part of his brother and stabbed Campanella in the stomach and one of his arms.

Ed Morris and Win Percy, two prominent Portland club men, left Eugene yesterday morning in canoes for home.

JOHN HOLMAN

Put on the Principle of Fame by the Albany Journal.

Salem Journal:

The writer had a talk with Col. John Holman, the oldest master machinist in western Oregon, now manager of the Albany Iron Works. He was a lathe man and mechanic from his boyhood and understands the practical operation of iron manufacture from A. to Z.

In 1867 he went to work for B. F. Drake at Salem, and in 1867 took charge. He had but one lathe and in 1868 bought another on tick at Oregon City. He got a $2800 contract from L. F. Grover of the Salem Flouring Mills, and made the price of the lathe on that job. In two years the rival iron works run by John Moore was put out
