

The Great American Game,

Thanksgiving generally marks the ending of the football season in this country. The present has been even more strenuous than any year preceding.

There are to be found those that object most decidedly to the game, for reasons that the game is rough, dangerous and ungentlemanly.

No such event has ever occurred in the State of Oregon as the great annual game of the Oregon's two greatest schools as played in Portland on Saturday last.

Think of the wild joy that must have filled the hearts of the Eugene supporters when they won what had been practically considered a hopeless proposition.

Lord Wellington on one occasion was witnessing the annual football contest as being waged between Oxford and Cambridge.

The game will surely live and each year will see the enthusiasm increasing over the great annual gridiron contests.

The Yellow Peril

The "Little brown man of the east." What means all this distrust of their sincerity and a general disbelief in their avowals of friendship?

Not long since one of their Elder Statesmen, on being interviewed by Richard Barry, stated, that to them has been given the right to dictate the policy of all the nations of the Eastern empires.

The Eastern Press regardless of political complexion seems to be actuated by more honorable principles than some of the Oregon publications.

Senator Fulton imagines himself the whole show in Oregon and according to statements recently made in the East imagines the common people unfit to have a voice in the election of men to high and responsible positions.

SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS.

In national affairs the publication of the expenses in the recent campaign has attracted attention.

Considerable is being made of the statement made by Mr. Bryan that he would run a fourth time if the people wanted him.

In Denver there is a place called an oasis, at the intersection of five streets, where pedestrians rush for safety from the speeding autos, motor cycles and teams.

Albany is a dry city and Denver is a very wet one, when it comes to the drink habit, and yet Denver is the drier city this Thinker ever saw.

One needs to take a trip to other states to appreciate this Willamette valley, which to the editor of the Democrat is more the garden spot of the world than ever, after a ride through the sage brush of Idaho and Wyoming.

A test trial of endurance in Denver is a sample of the spirit of the age. A pianist attempted to play 48 hours without stopping in order to make a new record.

Astactic Cunning.

A nation that is drunk with the successes of the past will prove the greatest possible danger to the other nations of the world.

It may be possible that the nations will again be awakened from their dreams of security and peace by the sound of the Japanese guns, and that, without the official declaration of war or other warning.

Extreme cunning is the primal characteristic of the people of the Far East. Feigning financial troubles and other distressing conditions as existent within her empire, she may be able to so deceive the powers, as to give her all the time desired to strengthen her hold on the throats of her victims.

Hansard's Sentence.

An error was made in the item appearing in last night's paper regarding the sentence of Brown Hansard of Lebanon. He was convicted on a charge of violating the local option law and fined $500 and given 30 days, instead of 20 as stated, in the county jail.
