MISFITS.

A Chautauqua gives a city character.

What a nuisance a dusty street is anyway.

The Chautauqua has made good beyond expectations.

Albany is proud of its Chautauqua and the program.

Some people think money is all there is to work for in the world.

That's a pointer. People go away with universal praise for the Chautauqua.

Five must be a popular number with the Oregon Electric. In Eugene it is after Fifth street also.

The Pie Eaters proved to have a good digestion, and the team stayed together the best of any in the league.

The mention of Judge Hewitt's name for circuit judge has met with a good deal of favor regardless of party.

Albany must keep on paving, not going to extremes, but adding some. It costs but when done you have something to show for it.

At one place in Portland, where an enthusiastic assembly meeting was held, there was one man present. He elected eight delegates all by his lonesome.

Now that Albany's Chautauqua has gotten on its feet in fine shape all the valley towns will want Chautauquas next year, the green-eyed monster Jealousy looming up.

Let Hill come in yeils the Eugene Guard, as loud even as the Democrat did.

"The Oregon Electric Railway Company, now operated by the Hill interests between Portland and Salem, is seeking entrance into Eugene. This news should bring a thrill of satisfaction to every loyal friend of the city—to every man who wants to see a real city built up here; it is the beginning of the consummation of our brightest hopes; it means competition in freight and passenger business, and the rapid development of the country through the magic influence of the greatest empire builder of the age."
