MISFITS.

Put the name Willamette to the front. It is a good one.

From the jungles of Africa to the blizzards of Nebraska there is trouble in the wake of Roosevelt's visits. He stirs things.

It takes the autos to burn the money in different ways. One, a new one costing $5,000 burned up in Crook county yesterday.

One Seattle lawyer yesterday in open court threatened to punch another's jaw, the other retorted, and the court punched the pocket book of each for $10 for contempt of court.

A Medford man paid $350 an acre for a Coburg orchard this week, he declared could not be bought for less than $1000 an acre at Medford. Little remarks like this are going to wake Willamette Valley people up.

W. J. Clarke, of the Gervais Star, candidate for state printer, permits an advertisement in his columns slandering the dry towns, in which it is stated that the non-licence policy increases taxes, etc. And this in the face of the fact that the average tax rate of the six leading whiskey cities of western Oregon, outside of Portland, is over 10 mills, while the rate of the six leading dry cities is only a little over 7 mills.

Brownsville.

Times: R. F. J. Thurston, president of the Calapooia Lumber Company, left Tuesday evening for the California lumber markets.

Miss Louise Pirtle of Albany visited friends in Brownsville from Saturday until Sunday afternoon.

Threshing in this part of Linn county is practically completed the only machine still running being the Ferrell machine and it will complete the season's run within a day or two. While the yield has not been enormous, it has been an average and perhaps a little better.

The Tracy Clothing Company packed their stock this week and shipped the same back to Albany. Mr. Tracy informed The Times before leaving that he had made the city an offer, through Mayor Irvine, to lease the lower story of the City Hall building for a year, provided a modern front would be put in, but the mayor had left town without giving him a reply, and he could not wait longer as it was getting almost too late to order new fall and winter goods.

Lebanon.

The E. A.—The Rev. J. A. Van Nevel of Albany will officiate at the services to be held in St. Edward's Catholic church Sunday September 11, at 11 a. m. There will be no evening service.

The T. C. Turner Co. will open their new general merchandise store in two or three weeks, in their new building, formerly occupied by the Huobs-Stevens Co. They have had the interior of their store renovated and improved.

Judge Duncan has decided the case of the appointment of a guardian for Marshall S. Clark, which was tried in Lebanon some time ago and taken under advisement. He decided that a guardian should be appointed, and the order was that C. E. Soule be appointed.
