F. G. WILL, for Watches

THREE GOOD MEN.

An exchange would have the state legislature take six or seven prominent subjects and cover the legislation of the session with them. The exchange would probably like to pick them out. If some one else was to make a selection of the six most prominent matters they would be entirely different, and so it would go. Each member of the state legislature has his ideas of right and wrong and he acts accordingly. The result is four or five hundred different bills every session. The great need is for state legislatures to meet the needs of the people. But what are the needs of the people? People differ as much as the trees in the forest over this very point, and always will differ, for they are built that way, and have a right to differ from other people. It would be absolutely impossible to restrict the number of bills to a certain line of important things, and it would be entirely improper to do so. The really great thing in selecting members of the legislature is to secure men of good common every day horse sense, who are honest and can be trusted to do the best they know how, men with minds of their own, who will not be condensed into any six bills suggested by the interests or any one else, but will act according to developments bound to occur in any legislature. Linn county should be well represented, and the Democrat takes pride in presenting Messrs. Tussing, Shaw and Denny as men of absolute integrity, backed by good judgment and a love of the interests of the people. Three more trustworthy men cannot be found in the Willamette Valley, and this is a fact worth digesting.

Capt. Jack All Right.

Andrew Carnegie said in introducing Capt. Jack: "I sent one of Captain Jack's books to Mr. Roosevelt and asked him to read it, and the President wrote and said that he had received a Broncho Book from the Broncho himself, and added, 'Captain Jack is all right,' and I say Capt. Jack is all right, and I take pleasure in presenting him." And turning to Captain Jack, who sat in his old buckskin garb, he said, "Now Jack, you are a king and we are your humble subjects;" and for an hour and forty five minutes the Poet Scout spoke, and received Mr. Carnegie's check for $500 for the lecture.

Captain Jack writes us: "I want to see my G. A. R. comrades in front of me."
