OREGON'S GROWTH.

Oregon has grown 60 per cent in ten years, adding an average of 25,000 a year. Of this over 10,000 a year has been in Portland. If a like growth continues the coming ten years, the state will have a population of over a million in 1920. The Democrat predicts considerably above that. There are indications of a much faster development the coming ten years than during the past ten years. The rest of the United States is just finding out about our wonderful resources, superior in many respects to most other sections of the country, on account of our mild climate and rich soil.

Albany during these ten years increased according to the census 33 per cent, really more than that if our limits were as they should be, but that stands as the official population. The Democrat expects to see the present figures more than doubled by 1920.

But securing greater population is not the only thing to consider. It is just as important to make a city a clean one morally and physically, a healthy one in which to live, and to build up those institutions that make life there more enjoyable, and the standard of citizenship the higher.

AN AUDIENCE DRUMMED UP FOR DRUM.

This is a unique old world, and things are done in odd shapes along the way. At the Y. M. C. A. convention in Eugene one of the speakers was a Mr. Drum, from the east. In order to drum up an audience for him a wagon load of drummers went around the city beating their drums, suggestive of the speaker. This is the modern circus style of doing things and is interesting. It is all right in a way, but it is somewhat to be deplored that such methods have to be resorted to.

MILLIONS FOR SPORT.

An eastern man has figured out that $75,000,000 is spent in the U. S. annually for sports,—figures that stagger one,—and yet after all that is less than a dollar an individual for sport, a small sum to spend for pleasure. It means that thousands do not spend anything, while some spend a good deal. We do well to spend a reasonable amount, but should not go to excess.
