DOINGS OF THE WORLD

On January 3 the new savings system will begin. It cost Oregon over $26,000 to print its election pamphlets.

C. H. Woody of McMinnville college, has won the Rhodes scholarship this year.

Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company is the name of the new railroad merger.

J. Randall of Okonagan county, Wash., wants five thousand cats to exterminate gophers.

Forest C. Smithson, the hurdler, of Portland, has moved to San Francisco to reside. He is going to aviate.

Another big railroad trust has been formed under the name merger, the value of the properties being $115,000,000.

After Jan. 1st mail will not be sent to box numbers only. The government doesn't propose to be a partner to hidden business.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Woods of Corvallis have the distinction of both being at the head of four generations, a remarkable event. Mr. Woods is 77 and Mrs. Woods 70.

There is to be a Christmas swim in Portland Monday forenoon, with seventy entries. This is always a great event, one that packs the bridge and shores. Think of a Christmas swim at New York.

Because the schools at Eugene received only a week's vacation, the same as everywhere else, a crowd of hoodlums in the schools circulated carbon disphosphate, limberger cheese, red pepper, etc., piled the school books in a pile, set the clock back, cut the electric wires and numerous other acts of cussedness.

Miss Barker Home.

Miss Margaret Barker has returned from Louisville, Ky., where she has been attending the superior lodge of the Degree of Honor. She has the honor of being chairman of the most important committee, that of finance. For several years she has attended all the superior lodges, visiting many of the principal cities of the middle east.

OLD TIME FIGHT

Between Harvey Scott and the Democrat's First Editor.

Joe. Niles in an article paying tribute to the late Harvey Scott, tells of an incident in which Scott and Jas. O'Meara, then editor of the Portland Bulletin, previously the founder of this paper and other papers, had a duel on the streets of Portland, after a duel in their papers.

"O'Meara was a man of very small stature, but sufficient in size and strength to at all times carry a piece of artillery of truly frightful proportions. The meeting occurred on Front street, in front of an auction house, conducted by A. B. Richardson. The meeting was a surprise to both. As O'Meara reached for his gun, Scott grappled with him and bore him down by sheer weight. After Scott had bested O'Meara and was seated upon him and his adversary helpless beneath his bulk, he was in a quandary to know what to do with his man. O'Meara still had his gun, and was in a mood to use it.

"Now that I have you down, I don't know what to do with you, you little Irish terror," exclaimed Scott.

"Were I on top I know what I would do—I'd save Keller the job of making sausage out of you, you fat swine," retorted the unconquerable O'Meara.

The adherents of the men separated them eventually, and after some counseling on each side, the principals to this bloodless, smokeless duel withdrew.

A DESCHUTES R. R. MAKER.

Elias Truax is down from the Deschutes for a holiday visit with Linn county relatives and friends. He has been working for several months on the Harriman road running down the Deschutes. Starting at Deschutes junction three miles from Biggs, seventy miles of rails have been laid, and work trains are running on it. Grading has been done as far as Redmond. The Hill road is about forty miles behind the Harriman road. The two roads will build twelve miles jointly, under agreement, using the same track, so that now the Harriman force will have to wait for the Hill builders until they catch up. Five or six hundred men are in the Harriman force and a good many more now in the Hill gang. While grading was in progress the forces were much larger, several thousand.

Railroad building has made live times along the line, and people there are anticipating big things from the advent of the road.

Prineville is about twenty miles to one side and other towns are expected to take the lead.

The Big Strike.

Chicago, Dec. 23.—With the railroad managers and locomotive engineers on the verge of open rupture and the most gigantic strike in railroad history but a few hours off, Labor Commissioner Neill tonight stayed the strike ordered and paved the way for an amicable settlement. The issue of peace or war will be determined tomorrow. At midnight the chances appeared to be on the side of peace.
