EASILY FRIGHTENED.

Willis Moore, at the head of the weather bureau of the U. S., says more people are killed by giving warning of coming tornado than die from the formadoes themselves. That is, many are frightened to death by the prospects of the tornado that may do them no harm. It doesn't take much to scare many people in this world. Just a little thing may set them going like a wild man.

WORST KIND OF MILITARY ROT

't appears that the distinguished military experts of France and Germany are strenuously at work to show that the United States and Japan must light. The argument of the German experts is that the control of the Pacific is essential to the commercial existence of Japan, and that in order to maintain this supretmacy Japan must have the control of Guam must have the control of Guam Japan must have the control of Guam and Hawaii as coaling stations and bases of supply. But can Japan con-trol the Pacinc? Will not England, Germany, France, Russia and other European powers have something to European powers have something to say with reference to the control of the Pacific? Great Britain is easily five times as powerful on the sea as Japan, and yet she does not pretend to control the Atlantic or even the Mediterranean or which she holds both the gates Suez and Gibraltar. The Mediterranean is an open sea. Japan cannot control the Pacific. It is doubtful if she could control the inland sea of Japan, to say nothing of the Yellow Sea, the sea of China, and other contiguous waters. The Pacific of the Pa other contiguous waters. The Pacific is by odds the biggest of occans, and no nation or nations can control it.

WANT A BUSINESS BASIS.

WINT A BUSINESS BASIS.

Here is a good expression of the value of a Northwest sales agency: In seeking to control the distribution of fact reops through the organization of a central sales agency, the growers of the Northwest have no intention of an attempt to corner the apple or peach market. Their sole aim is to put the orchard industry on a business basis; by climinating some of the speculative uncertainties that prevail today. Such an organization would operate in favor of the legitimate dealer today. Such an organization would operate in favor of the legitimate dealer and the consumer as well. The greatest obstack to be overcome is to make the growers themselves appreciate these facts. Many have feared that the proposition is no large to handle. To them the sering on a $10,000,000 crop looks like a suppendous job, because they don't stop to consider that there are many far larger business enterprises ancessfully conducted in the country don't scop to consider that there are many far larger business enterprises successfully conducted in the country today. However, there are enough districts far sujusted enough to see that the proposed organization offers hope for better conditions and there is every probability to believe that it will become effective this year, even if not all the Northwest districts do come in at the start.

will become effective this year, even if not all the Northwest districts do some at at the start.

WHY SO MUCH FUSS.

The result was a victory for the administration and the start of Ex-President T. R. Roosevelt in Oregon? It is probably plain enough. He has done things, the most conspicuous man in the world for several years. He has done things, the most conspicuous man in the world for several years. When he retired from the presidency, after an eventful administration, he did not retire to some sequestered spot and go to farming but he kept in the public eye, making speeches and hunting lions. He may have been lost sight of for a few week, but he emerged more conspicuous than ever. He does things, and then some more, and keeps everlastingly at it, a man of enormous energy. Perhaps the most erratic man of them all, some times fool things a school boy would not do, but always something, and that strikes the public.

ALBANY COLLEGE.

"Oh, Albany College will not get that first $200,000," some one says; but perhaps it will all the same. It is cerytainly very emphatically hoped it will get it. If it does it will mean the success of the college, giving it a standing among colleges of the state of a high order. Whenever a college gets a fine ondowment it alwaymeans more, for the spirit of the age is to give to those that have, and this is peculiarly true of colleges. A striking piece of literature is the affidavit of the plaintiff in the divorce suit of Isaac N. Watson against Mary E. Watson, in the application of the defendant for suit money, which Judge Gailoway very properly denied.

The plaintiff is 81 years of age, and the defendant, who resides in South Dakota, nearly as old.

In opposing this application the plaintiff swore that he was in the civil war five years, being wounded five times and has a pension of $24, that he owns 25 acres of rocky land near Sodaville, of which two acres is cleared, that he lives in an old barn, and has besides a small stable and hen house, with forty chickens that are not laying, two pigs three monts old not worth over $2.50, a horse seventeen years old he could not give away, a buggy 27 years old and an old harness to match, and no other property; that it takes every pound of meat and every egg the hem lay to keep body and soul together, with the bare necessities of life, that he left Dakota twenty years ago after his wife deserted him, after giving her their homestead of 160 acres, now worth at least $10,000, starting with $72, all he had, coming here and securing 25 acres upon which to end his days, stripping himself of everything for her.

The Oregon Trunk road has reached Culver Junction, just over the hills east of Albany, and will soon be at Crooked river, where a big bridge is to be built. tinguished statesman and lion hunter, the man of character, but erratic.

After the noise had subsided he said:
Ladies and gentlemen, it is a pleasure for me to be up in Oregon again and see you. I understand there are some twins here. That suits me. I like the Oregon stock, and am glad to see it kept up, which I have observed as I came down this winding and beautiful valley, seeing your people. You see it kept up, which I have observed as I came down this winding and beautiful valley, seeing your people. You have such a state and people as will make a great commonwealth out of it in leadership you are looked to to set the example to all of us. Fundamentally we need just the fidellity and haneaty you have shown. It is not genius but the spirit displayed by the old soldiers, with their staid qualities, carrying his share in government, that counts. You don't have to look over your shoulder to see him, and helis worth tying to. I don't care what a man is, whether a bricklayer or what, what we want is true manhood. The right stuff is not only good tor citizenship but we want developed the same qualities in reference to matters of state."

And the train sped on towards Portland, where a great receotion has been prepared for the celebrated man, most conspicuous of all Americans today.
