STORY OF THE MYSTIC ROSE.

The plot centers around a Japanese geisha girl. San Kura, and her trals and ultimate happiness. A company of American sight-seers meet in front of the tea house of a Hundred Stept, near Yokobama, in which San Kura is employed. Among the tourists is escientist, Harkins, who by pre-arrangement meets a Miss Brant, whom his aunt has designed that he shall marry. As the aunt fails to arrive Miss Brant is without a chaperon, and arranges with Miss Sue, from Akron, Ohio, to act in this capacity. Sue is in quest of an ex-actor, Izzy Wright, who had promised to marry her and subsequently had run away.

Izzy, in company with another adventurer, Willie Wyun, is in Yokohama at this time and a detective called Spots attempts to locate them. While the villagers are merrymating, under the direction of Okama, a priest of Shaman, Bun Jan, a fisherman, appears with a stone, which he found in the stomach of a shark, and the priest says it is the wishing stone called the Mystic Rose, and that the one holding it may have three wishes granted.

one noting it may have three wishes granted.

In the meantime Harkins and San Kura fall in love.

When Bun Jan finds that he receives nothing but honor for returning the Mystic Rose, he regrets his honesty and with the help of Izzy and Wilhe steals it from the Temple that they may sell it. Their act is discovered by San Kura and also by Sue.

Bun Jan, to save himself, accuses San Kura of the theft, and the prest orders her arrest. Harkins 'escapes with her to the forest in company with the other Americans.

Bun Jan appears on the scene, and with the other Americans.

Bun Jan appears on the scene, and after much hardship, wishes that he were dead, and as he holds the wishing stone he is immediately dead.

Afterward Okama appears again to re-arrest San Kura, but she is cleared by Sue, who accuses Izzy and Willie of the theft, and also of the possible murder of Bun Jan.

Willie, who has the stone, to save himself, wishes Bun Jan alive, and it himself, wishes Bun Jan alive, and it

Then San Kura is made happy by the prospect of a trip to America, as the wife of Harkins.

In the meantime, Spots has made successful love to Suc, and she says she will go home, too. When Izzy asks him if she did not come to Japan for him she rolles. "Not necessarily:

for him, she replies, "Not necessarily; I came to bring back a husband," whereupon she departs with Spots.

DOWN AT PANAMA.

DOWN AT PANAMA.

In a letter from Cristobal, C. Z., to C. H. Walker, Rev. J. C. Elliott says: Feb. 2nd, 1912—I am full of plans and hopes yet to be fulfilled, though I expect that this state of mind does not turn time backwards. We now think of returning to Washington in a few weeks. The reports of the severe weather me, discourage us and keep us here a little longer.

When in Washington I was very much interested in pending legislation and frequently called upon those senators and representatives having special bills in charge.

This tropical climate has many charms. It is pleasantly warm every day and night, varying only a few degrees from 80 F. There is not enough wariety to relieve monotony. Tropical fruits of all sorts are abundant, but nothing is superior to the orange and banama with whick you are familiar. Then there is an utter absence of the products of the temperate zone. Near ly everything that the Americans cat is brought from the states, even the feed for the horses and cows. I was yesterday in the best garden on the zone and they were trying to raise lettuce and tomatoes, trying to get lettuce to head and tomatoes to fruit, with little success. The Chinese are the most successful gardeners and I bought of a Chinaman his largest tomatoes, perhaps two inches across.

The big thing here is of course the ditch, but the greatest thing about the ditch is its complete freedom from insect pesis of all sorts and the sanitation, so that this is about the healtniest place on earth.

Grand Display and Show Windows Unsurpassed.

Chambers & McCune'a windows on First street displaying the new Spring and Summer Embroideries imported direct from Switzerland by this prodirect from Switzerland by this progressive firm would be a credit to any large city in America. All of the first atreet windows are given to this display, which is only one-fourth of their import order. They are placed in the windows one week in advance of their carnival of white which opens at 9 o'clock Wednesday, Feb. 21st and not one yard will be sold before that date. Don't fail to see the windows either day or night. day or night.

Are Not Imitators.

Minstrel companies may come and go, Minatrel companies may come and go, the white man may black his face and hands, but after all there is but one "real one" and that is the Nashville Students, an organization that will live forever. The Nashville Students have kept faith with the public for twenty-five years, and each succeeding year makes them more popular. They are coming in all their glory next Tuesday. A splendid concert band will give a free concert at noon on above date.

Another Auto Iruck.

J. L. Irvine has sold W. A. Long a Buick auto truck, which he will use in the business in this city, making two for Albany. Mr. Long is a former At-bany drayman, a reliable man.

Jesse O Drake, a Roseburg editor, will be tried this week on the charge of criminal libel against Judge J. W. Hamilton, a member of the judiciary with a clean record.

SATURDAY NIGHT THOUGHTS.

Mr. Taft has been making speeches this week in the interest of his candi-dacy for reelection; but, as for that, as soon as he took his seat three years as soon as he took his seat three years ago he began working for another term and his administration has been run with that in view, more than as the servant of all the people regardless of politics. In this respect he is probably like other presidents we have had. It is the modern system, but a vicious one.

This week it was announced that after many years seeking the locks at Oregon City will be owned by the government and be free. Whether it will reduce freight rates or not it is entirely proper. It should never cost anything to pass over any highway in the shape of penalty.

While paving is expensive the city

While paving is expensive the city does well that increases its area along sane lines, without going to extremes. It is a business proposition, though, and it is the business of the city council to see that the best pavement possible for the price be secured, according to their judgment. One hears a good many charges of graft in connection with pavement rates generally; but on the face of it it is an expensive business, requiring machinery and red tape.

Another boy went wrong, foolishly. It happens all the time. Why will people deliberately throw away chances of success on something that means detection and treather.

It happens all the time. Why who people deliberately throw away chances of success on something that means detection and trouble.

This is an age of genuine extravagance. In Albany we occasionally hear of people who live beyond their means and spend a few hundred a year on their clothes; but this is a very tame matter compared with what is going on in the ultra-fashionable world east. A case is now in view, one startling people. Mrs. C. H. Ahthony, of Munice, Ind., has been in Washington this week, with twenty-five evening gowns, rich in rare laces and studied in gems, thirty tailored suits for the streets, not appearing twice in the same gown; forty gowns for mornings and afternoons; a has to match each gown; ermine, minx, white fox and sable furs; but what beats them all, shoes set in diamonds, one of cloth gold with big diamonds in the heels, another of Duchesse lace, silver and brocade, blue and pink, all the heels set with diamonds, streer boots of gold beads, buckskin shoes with sardonyx buttons. Besides all her fingers are overflowing gith diamond and other rings, and her arms are bangled in gold to the clows. Her garters are gold in the form of snakes with diamond eyes, her headdress of airgrettes costing a small fortune, fastened with pearls.

She says many a husband is won by a pretty gown. Yes, and many are lost by such fool extravagance as that of Mrs. Anthony, a worshipper of Fashion.

Mr and Mrs. Oscar Smallwood, of Durango, Colo., are in the city, and after looking over Oregon for several weeks have decided to make Lion county their home. Mr. Smallwood has a dairy farm, which he expects to sell, when he will buy here and go into the same business.

"I earnestly recommend that all the people on this day write their friends and relatives in other states showing to them the great possibilitie of Oregon for the farmer, the stockraiser, the dairyman, the poultryman, the fruitgrower—for all prodactive industries—in order that those whom Oregon needs may be induced to join with us in the upbuilding and the development of our magnificent state."
