THE PRIZE WINNER.

All prohibitions, however, regal or priestly, were of no avail, and tobacco is now the most extensively used lux-ury in the world. Tobacco contains several poisons, ing paralysis. They also weaken the heart.

As a rule pupils who use cigarettes do the poorest work. General school statistics of school work show that only six out of every hundred cigarette smokers pass the second year of high school, while 95 out of every 100 non-smoking boys acquire a good education. Therefore they can hardly ever get a good position.

Out of the highest scholarship men, only about five use tobacco, while of the men who do not get appointments over 60 per cent are tobacco users.

Many young men have acquired the opium habit by cigarette smoking. The cigarette is mightier than the saloon for the following reasons: "It is more easily obtained than liquor," "It is cheaper," it includes the alcohol habit since its continued use develops the craving for liquor; it goes deeper and further than the saloon. The cigarette is the only royal road to the penitentiary. It is responsible for more crime than any other one thing today, so far as the juvenile court is concerned.

Doors of opportunity are closed to total loss of sight.

Mr. Solley, an eminent writer on the brain, said once in a lecture, "I know of no other cause or agent which tends so much to lead to organic diseases of the brain as the excessive use of tobacco. The influence of tobacco on the human system is quite as much to be dreaded as the use of alcohol. Not one, young man in a hundred would ever think of using intoxicating liquors did he not first learn to use tobacco in some form.

Daughters of drunken fathers do not inherit a hankering after liquor, neither would the sons did they but abstain from the use of tobacco. And yet ministers of the gospel and many of the deacons of our churches, good men, so-called, who preach temperance to the youths of the land under the vile stuff or moke smoke louises of their heads as if the end and aim of life with them was to pickle their tongues in smoke and their whole bodies are so saturated with the vile stuff that their neighbors' nostrils announce their coming after off.

The smoking of a single cigar and especially by those not long habituated to its use, will increase the pulse from ten to fifteen beats. Dr. Tuit-chell states that nearly all the sudden leaths occurring during sleep which came under his observation, were those of persons who had indulged largely in the use of tobacco. And subsequently the correctness of his subsequently the correctness of Tobacco in different forms costs the people of the United States more than $30,000,000 annually, all of which is far worse than if thrown away. It impairs the voice, furrows the cheek and sallows the complexion. And last, but not least, it makes angry mothers and scolding wives. For example, the complaint of the old woman who said:—

They spit in every corner, they spit

In the world.

Tobacco contains several poisons, of which nicotine is the most active and the deadliest.

This prodigal use of tobacco weakens the system and shortens the life. Cigarettes are often made of the poorest grade of tobacco, mixed with cigar stumps picked from the str. t.

Cigarette smoking is the most harmful use of tobacco. Cigarettes the most harmful use of tobacco. Cigarettes benumb the nerves, frequently causing paralysis. They also weaken the heart.

Loyal Jons Entertained.

Last evening the Loyal Daughters of the Christian church Sunday School, entertained the Loyal Sons at the hospitable home of Miss Belle Thompson, 527 E Fourth street, in a Leapyear party. A short, business session was followed by games and an evening of general merit. The hostess served delightful refreshments. There were forty two present, a fine lot of young people, casting due credit on their teachers, Mrs. Perry and Mr. Holbrook.

more crime than any other one tung today, so far as the juvenile court is concerned.

Doors of opportunity are closed to cigarette smokers.
Out of 90 boys imprisoned in the county jail during six months, all but two are cigarette fiends.
The cigarette habit is the path along which boys march to drunkenness, declares a judge.
And Harold Hamilton, a Chicago artist, who smoked cigarettes for 15 years, says, "It is no more possible for an inveterate, noison-soaked cigarette fiend to continue his life without the aid of whisky than it would be without the aid of whisky than it would be without the aid of othacco itself.
In London, Ontario, a lad 19 years old, a cigarette fiend, took to whisky and the two habits brought on "cigarette tremens." He went crazy and is now in the asylum.

There are but few substances in nature that are capable of destroying life so suddenly as tobacco.
Dr. Franklin applied the oily material which floats on the surface of water when a current of tobacco smoke is passed into it, to the tongue of a cat, and found it to destroy life in a few minutes.

The prolonged use of tobacco, especially when it is chewed, causes the total loss of sight.

Following is the essay that won the prize at the high school building last night, on the subject of narcottes, presented by Miss Hazel Chapman:

Tobacco is a very important plant belonging to the nightshade family.

According to some authorities, smoking was practiced by the Chinnes at a very early date. At the time of the discovery of America, tobacco was in frequent use among the Indians and the practice of smoking, which had with them a religious character, was common to all the tribes.

The name tobacco was either derived from the term used in Hayit to designate the pipe, or from tobacco in San Domingo, whence it was introduced into Spain and Portugal in 1559 by a Spaniard. It soom found its way to Paris and Rome and was first used in the shape of snuff.

Smoking is generally supposed to have been introduced into England by Sir Walter Raleigh, but Camden says "the practice was introduced by Drake and his companions on their return from Virginia in 1858.

It was strongly opposed by both priests and rulers.
