RUNNING COMMERCIAL CLUBS

A movement was agitated in Albany Commercial Club at one time to have the business done by all the members of the Club instead of by board of directors, the present plan. Medford was quoted as a city where the business was done by the entire membership in open meeting. In view of the fact the following from the Medford Sun will be of much interest:

Apparently there are about a dozen live men in the Medford Commercial club. For the last six months these faithful twelve have attended meetings and have transacted the business of the organization.

What is the matter of the other 340 members? Do they want the affairs of this club directed by 3 per cent of the membership? Do they think Medford has forged ahead far enough, or are they too lazy to spend a few hours a month considering the matters of importance which are constantly coming up before the local organization for consideration and action.

Business conditions have not been the best during the last year throughout the country. But this is no excuse for laying down and putting in a call for the undertaker.

Business conditions are already improving. The Rogue River valley is promised the largest and best fruit crop in its history. Factories are negotiating for location here, irrigation is growing and receiving greater and greater support; new settlers are coming in by every train, an important railroad project is under consideration, boom days have passed, but the elements of rational and consistent activity are here, and all the public spirited citizens should gather around to insure the benefits of it.

It is poor sort of citizenship which lies down at one time when all should gather together and put their shoulders to the wheel.

Every member of the Commercial club has ample opportunity to know when the meetings were held. Every call issued should result in a well filled hall. It is high time for the members of the club to wake up.
