WHAT WILL THEY DO WITH IT?

Now the republicans have won their victory the question arises, "What will they do with it?" They already have the Senate and after March 4th will have the chief executive and the House of Representatives. Full power for legislative action, with all its responsibilities, will be theirs. What will they do to reduce the growing surplus piling up? In the treasury and threatening business interests by a rapidly contracting currency? Will they follow the dogma of the Chicago platform and repeal the internal revenue taxes "rather than give up any part of our protective system?" Will they, following the anti-platform lines of the Senate bill, reduce the duty on sugar by half, increase duty on wool and woolsens, give the country free alcohol for the arts, free tobacco and free chemicals? Will they, taking a lesson from Disraeli, face about and pass a genuine tariff reform bill in the direction of greater freedom of trade? Or will they attempt to relieve the congested treasury by extravagant appropriations? Whichever course they shall attempt they will find lions in the way—republican lions threatening to rend their party in twain. The wisest republican leaders will know the tariff taxes must be materially reduced or the hold of their party on power will be short. Doubtless some of these leaders will attempt a reduction of the onerous duties. But can they hope to succeed? Have they not so educated a large part of the rank and file of their party into economic ignorance and bigoted belief in salvation by high tariff taxation that any attempt on their part to follow the path of wisdom will result only in their own political destruction? It would seem that, committed as it is to the high protection heresy, the coming republican majority in Congress will be forced in the very nature of things to go on and on in its high taxing career until the party is swept from power by the rising wrath of a plundered people and with it the whole system of protection robbery and waste.

The shut down contemplated by the coal operators in the Monongahela district, whereby 6000 miners will be thrown out of employment at the very beginning of winter, is but the repetition of an old story.

It is not because coal is too plentiful that the mines are closed. An artificial scarcity is regularly created by the Coal Ring in order to "maintain prices." All the coal mined could be sold at a fair profit if all who need fuel could afford to buy what they want. But the operators could not then "make large fortunes each year" by an arbitrary increase of the price.

This is the way of trusts and other combinations. They first secure control of the market, then "restrict production" and then advance the price. Meanwhile the "protected" workingmen are remorselessly thrown into enforced idleness because the monopoly decides to "put the screws" on the consumers.

How do the good people relish the prospect of "four years more" of this sort of thing?

Amongst what may be called the queer results of the election is the declaration by William Walter Phelps that unless the republican party gives the country some drastic tariff reform it will be beaten and permanently destroyed in 1892. While it may be said that Mr. Phelps' views are toned by the result in his own state, New Jersey, in which the manufacturing employers and laborers vied with each other in earnestness for the principles of the President's message, it must in candor be confessed that they have a broader base. Accepting the theory of protection as taught by Clay and all its great apostles, our "infant manufactures" begin to feel the restraint of their childish garments and are quickened by the purposes of completed manhood. They want wider markets and accept Senator Evarts' chance endorsement of commercial truth when he said, "If we wish to sell we must consent to buy."

The democratic press will cast no reflection on Grover Cleveland. He is an honest courageous man, who did his duty with conscientious sincerity, without speculating upon the partisan consequences. Not since Lincoln has there been as brave and honest a president as Grover Cleveland. That he failed of the reward that he ought to have had was because he was a statesman and a patriot, rather than a scheming, tricky politician. Not less in defeat than in victory do the democrats honor Grover Cleveland, and this will be the sentiment of the democratic party everywhere.

"The tariff is in the hands of its friends," says a republican paper. This means that it is in the hands of millionaires who have been made so by its exactions. It was framed by them, has been continued for their benefit, and if the senate bill should become a law, will be increased to meet their demands.
