

Daily Democrat

A Rochester man celebrated Washington's birthday by putting an egg under his hen and telling her to hatchet.

The immensity of the work necessary to get up the Sunday edition of the New York World will be appreciated by newspaper men when they learn that to get up last Sunday's edition 662 stereotyped plates were cast for it alone.

Lesoma Gaines, of Tiffin, Ohio, married a man named McQueen, was divorced, married Samuel Seitz, was divorced, married Jacob Meeker, was divorced, and then remarried Seitz. They could not agree, were separated, but married a third time, and a third time were divorced. Meeker meantime had married again and been divorced, and now he and Mrs. Seitz have remarried and will try it again.

President Harrison's typewriter, Miss Sawyer, has aroused the enthusiasm of Washington correspondents. She cannot whistle, like Elijah Halford, but she can sing with the best amateur in the land. She has plump, round, red cheeks, brown hair, large, gray eyes and a trim little figure. She looks about twenty years old, but is probably older. She knows more about Harrison's political secrets than Halford himself, and she knows how to keep her knowledge to herself. Her special bete noire is a newspaper man, no matter how pleasant he may look.

That was an immense territory that was admitted to this glorious union of states by the recent action of congress with the approval of the executive. Here are the dimensions: Dakota, 147,700 square miles; Montana, 145,310 square miles; Washington, 66,880—a total of 359,890 square miles. Dakota alone has more square miles than New York, 47,620; Pennsylvania, 44,985; Maryland, 9866; Vermont, 9135; New Hampshire, 9005; Massachusetts, 8040; Connecticut, 4845; New Jersey, 7455; Delaware, 3550; and Rhode Island, 1960. The three territories contain more territory than Great Britain and Ireland and France.

A recent Russian report on the agricultural situation in leading grain exporting countries holds that "the position of the Indian grain market cannot, of course, be compared in the least with that of the United States of America, as the native rural population are in a state of poverty, debt and complete ignorance, while the ordinary productiveness of the soil is not equal to that of America. In fact, the present wheat exports of India to Europe must be considered as artificial and only temporary, owing to rice being the staple food of the natives. Should the consumption of wheaten bread become more common, India, with her comparatively low power of production, will be obliged to become an importing country. Indian exports may be called artificial for another reason: the cultivation of wheat is proportionately too dear to withstand competition in Europe."

A boy who is polite to father and mother, is likely to be polite to everybody else.

A boy lacking politeness to his parents, may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy.

We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, for the impression which we make in society, coveting the good opinion of others, and caring too little for the opinion of those who are in a sense a part of ourselves, and who will continue to sustain and be interested in us, notwithstanding these defects of deportment and character.

We say to every girl, cultivate the habit of courtesy and propriety at home—in the kitchen as well as in the parlor, and you will be sure in other places to deport yourself in a becoming and attractive manner.

The home of the late Gen. Sheridan is still sad in the remembrance of the death of its distinguished head, but amid all this sorrow there is a quiet joy in the heart of Mrs. Sheridan in her children. The eldest daughter Mary is now thirteen and very bright. The twin daughters, Louise and Irene, named after their aunt and their mother, take after them in beauty, and "Little Phil," just turning nine, is a perfect reproduction of the "Little Phil," the hero of Winchester and Five Forks. In stature and physiognomy he is a counterpart of his father, which is a great source of consolation to his mother. The "Little Phil" of the family shows all the courage and equanimity of the "Little Phil" of history. One of the recollections of the family during their sad journey to Nonquitt by land while the fatally stricken General was being conveyed thither by sea was an incident at Staunton. The private car in which Sheridan and family were making the journey had been placed on a side track to await the through train. In switching, a car came thundering along the same track. The family, seeing the danger, retreated in great haste and confusion to the opposite end of the car. "Little Phil" took in the situation at once, but was not to be stampeded. He braced himself between the seats and looked defiance at the approaching car, which was still not responding promptly to the brakes. When it struck with considerable force "Little Phil" was still there, holding his own, while his mother and sisters and Mrs. Kellogg were considerably alarmed.

There is no more inoffensive and harmless thing, apparently, than the slivers of white wood so numerous about the public eating places. Yet the autopsy of a young man who died suddenly in New York the other day revealed the fact that he was a victim of the toothpick. Some of the internal works were a good deal like pin cushions, putting toothpicks in place of pins. He had evidently been in the habit of chewing the little dental searchers and swallowing the fiber. Possibly his deserts were light, and he sought to eke them out with the woody substitute. But it is quite common to chew toothpicks and swallow some of the fiber. The New York case shows the fate of the toothpick fiend.

In Japan the nose is the only feature which attracts attention. The nose determines the beauty or the ugliness of a face according as it is big or little. This is probably due to the fact that difference in noses constitutes about the only distinction between one Japanese face and another. The eyes are invariably black, the cheek bones high and the chin receding. In Japan a lady who has a huge proboscis is always a raging beauty and a reigning belle. There are few large noses among the natives, and lucky indeed is he or she upon whom nature lavishes one. In all Japanese pictures representing supposedly beautiful women the artists turns himself loose on the nose.

SOLD OUT.

Having sold my interest in the store of general merchandise of the firm of Coshow & Cable to C. E. Stanard, I wish to call the attention of all who know themselves indebted to Coshow & Cable to call and settle at once. Having sold out on account of poor health I expect to change climates for awhile, and all accounts not settled before I get ready to leave Brownsville will be left with an officer for collection. A word to the wise is sufficient, O. P. Coshow.
