

Daily Democrat

It is an arctic period when Linn county, or Linn county boys, get left. Thomas Shields, son of the late Captain Shields, of this city, has been appointed by Governor Penoyer, County Judge of the new county of Harney.

There are many nice little green oases all through the desert of life, but the Albany fat man who broke a suspender the other day when running for dear life to catch a train that came on schedule time did not think of this.

It is estimated that the expenses of the election in Boston next November will be nearly $100,000, instead of the $13,000 or $14,000 which has been about the highest cost in any past year. The increase is mainly due to the new ballot law which goes into effect Nov. 1.

That delectable, sweet scented ward striker and doer of dirty work for the dominant republican faction in Portland John P. Ward, has been appointed Appraiser of merchandise in that city by President Harrison. This presages a return to the rotten methods in vogue when such men as Ben Simpson held federal sway in Oregon. It will be no credit to this administration.

San Francisco's free public library now numbers 52,000 volumes, and is installed in rooms in the new City Hall, which do not offer sufficient accommodations for patrons. The librarian declares that the public of that city like solid reading, as his records show only 50 per cent of fiction called for. The library now is allowed only $18,000 per year, but an effort will be made to have the appropriation raised to $50,000. The poet John Vance Cheney is the librarian.

At one of the recent Moody revival meetings on this coast the customary request was made that those suffering from any particularly heavy burden should stand up and ask for the prayers of the assembled multitude. After a few moments' silence a tall, meek looking man arose and, in a voice choked with emotion, asked that the prayers of the congregation might be offered for his mother-in-law. Instead of praying the congregation first began to titter and finally roared with laughter.

No man ever accepted defeat more gracefully than President Cleveland. His entertainment of President and Mrs. Harrison was one of the neatest acts of courtesy performed in the White House in many years, while his philosophical views of the recent election, as expressed in an interview, again demonstrate the wonderful grit of the man. President Cleveland, strong even in defeat, cannot be entirely a political corpse and this fact his enemies would do well to consider when setting up the pins for 1892.

From our regular correspondent.
WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, March 11th, 1889.

Harrison will be a dead man in less than three months if the horde of greedy office seekers do not cease persecuting him. Already his right arm is lamed and his complexion has the suspicious chalky white appearance of ill health. But the crowd still comes marching on, fairly falling over each other in their eagerness to reach the ear of the President. Such a gang was never before seen in Washington. It was thought at the beginning of Mr. Cleveland's administration that the pressure for office was great, but compared with that now going on, it was as a summer zephyr to an untamed Dakota blizzard. Every man except those that have died, that ever held office under a republican administration is here clamoring for vindication in the shape of an appointment to his old place or to a better one, and in addition there are thousands of men who are after getting their first taste of official life. These last think the Government service needs a liberal infusion of new blood, provided, of course, that they furnish it. Between them they are making a torment for Mr. Harrison as great as any that ever existed on this earth, and there is little chance of a change until everything worth scrambling for is given out. In the meantime Mr. Harrison's worst enemy could not wish him worse punishment than he is daily undergoing.

There's a big row in the republican camp already. It is a question of veracity between Harrison and ex-Governor Alger. Alger told the Michigan delegation that Harrison had expressed great regret on account of having to leave him (Alger) out of the cabinet, and that as a slight compensation the President had told him that he might name a man for Solicitor General. He named H. M. Duffield, whom he asked the delegation to endorse, at the same time assuring them that it was only a formality; that the appointment would be considered personal, and would not be changed to the state. The delegation endorsed the application and carried it immediately to Mr. Harrison. The delegation was struck dumb when the President told them he knew nothing about the matter, and that they had better file the application with the Attorney General. What transpired when the delegation got back to Alger is not yet known.

It will be a long time before any administration attains the social success of the last one. Mrs. Cleveland as the popular idol is not likely to have a successor for many years to come, if ever.

Visitors to New York city may see the name of Cleveland on the door of a legal dispensary, and within a quiet gentleman industriously looking after the interests of clients. He resembles very much a gentleman who did similar business at Buffalo about ten years ago. He has had a number of notable experiences since he left Buffalo.

Mrs. Harrison will have no spring house cleaning this year. The tenants who moved out the first part of the month, didn't leave a spider web in the garret or broken bottle lying about the cellar.

Belva Lockwood says she is the mother of the Prohibition party—and we guess she didn't bring it up on the bottle.

At what age were you married? She asked, inquisitively. But the other lady was equal to the emergency and quietly responded: "At the parsonage."

It is said that President Harrison's first removal from office was of a wounded veteran soldier.

It is generally conceded by physicians that about one-half of the population of the United States are suffering from indigestion and dyspepsia. Hurried eating and improper mastication and insalivation of food are the principal causes. Dr. Henley's Dandelion Tonic strengthens and invigorates the digestive organs, and enables one to enjoy a hearty meal without any unpleasant after effects. Sold by Foshay & Mason.
