

Daily Democrat

President Harrison is the fourteenth lawyer to hold the executive chair of the nation.

Republicans must be very hungry when go of them will apply to R. B. Hayes and ask him to aid them.

Mr. Samuel J. Randall ought to be in consultation with the republican leaders during the recess, framing a new tariff bill in the interest of monopolies.

Bishop W. S. Perry, of Iowa, has issued a call for divine worship in all of the Protestant Episcopal churches in that state on the day of the centennial celebration of Washington's inauguration.

A successful apple grower of Seneca county, N. Y., finds the Baldwin the most profitable variety. He plants 40 feet apart each, manures with wood ashes, and cultivates until the trees are eight years old. Sheep or swine are then turned into the orchard for pasture.

Prof. Lodge, the eminent English electrician, has recently written a letter, discussing the possibility of dissipating fogs by means of discharges of electricity. He has himself made experiments, said to have been successful, in which smoke was condensed in a room; but nothing on a large scale has been attempted.

It is said that the nearest living relative to George Washington is E. B. Ball, an old man of 80, who occupies a stall in the south corridor of the pension building at Washington, where he sells cigars and fruit to the clerks. Relative or not, the old gentleman bears a striking resemblance to the father of his country.

The presence of sewer gas in a room may be detected by the following method: Unglazed paper is saturated with a solution of acetate of lead in rain water, one ounce of lead salt being dissolved in eight ounces of the liquid. Allow the paper to partially dry and then expose it in the room which is suspected of containing deleterious gas. Any considerable quantity of the gas will turn the paper black.

The Speaker of the Colorado Legislature has just received the following cheerful message:

"To the Speaker: If you don't adjourn within ten days the den of thieves over which you preside and the Senate will be blown up with dynamite. This is no bluff, but straight goods. JOHN F. PALMER.
P. S.—The people can stand so much, but not too much. J. F. P."

The legislature is strongly republican.
At her last reception in the White House Mrs. Cleveland took to counting the number of Hading yells that passed before her. She became so interested in the occupation that she forgot to pay attention to the introductions made by Marshal Wilson. As she shook hands with a pretty young woman wearing one of the striking veils undergoing enumeration, the president's wife exclaimed: "Four hundred and one." The girl looked up in surprise and Mrs. Cleveland realized that she had made a faux pas. She at once abandoned the count.

Shades of the immortal Blackstone! Young Walker Blaine, whose short professional career has been a failure from the start, succeeds the learned lawyer and author, Francis Wharton, deceased, as legal adviser of the Department of State. The venerable writer of law books and treatises had forgotten more of law than this callow young man who succeeds him will ever know. But he is the son of his father, who is not supposed to require any very great amount of advice regarding the laws which apply to foreign claims. In keeping the claims business in the family Mr. Blaine demonstrates his usual commercial shrewdness.

District-Attorney Watts, of West Virginia, has called forth a manifestation of the ballot-reform and civil service reform policy of the Administration by indicting 200 of Quay's and Elkin's illegal voters in West Virginia, and by refusing to resign when requested to do so on account of such pernicious activity. He thus compels the Administration to assign a cause for his removal or to make it in a way equivalent to an admission that there is no assignable reason for it. The public will see just 200 reasons for it in the indictment of 200 illegal voters who prefer to be prosecuted by a beneficiary of the crimes they committed.

A few days ago at Kingston in Canada a College exhibition was to come off. The professor had a large American flag spread on the stage, and on it was a structure representing the throne of England. A young lady who represented the queen of England came out to the throne and took a seat on it, when the professor alluded to the stars and stripes as being beneath her, and said that the fact showed the relations existing between England and the United States. Some of those who were present say that she then stamped on it. A murmur ran over the audience, as many Americans were present. The professor again pointed to the flag, and while the queen was looking down at it said: "That is the way Britons look at the American flag." Many of the loyalists in the hall took exception in private to the action of the professor, who is a Scotchman, and the press also strongly disapproved of the professor's course.

General Black, whose administration of the Pension Bureau has been a fine example of devotion to the interest of the pensioners and the public, will, on leaving office, resume the law practice in Chicago, taking with him the best wishes of millions who feel themselves to be his personal friends.

Mr. Springer was mainly instrumental in securing the admission of Dakota to the Union. The smart Alecks in that blizzard breeding country have rewarded him by sending him a leather medal and an insulting message. The Dakota idea of decency seems to have been borrowed from some county jail.

About the first business of the new administration will be to look after the Oklahoma boomers. President Cleveland managed to keep them out of the Indian Territory, but they have started in again to find out what kind of stuff President Harrison is made of.

The place hunters who have invaded Washington are as eager for the scalps of the left over Republicans as for those of the wicked Democrats. The ins are all rascals in the eyes of the outs, no matter what they belong to.

There is a total decrease in the shipments of wheat from all American ports of nearly 10,000 bushels as compared with a year ago.
