A physicians says: "Girls in feeble health should take a tramp through the woods or fields every day." But suppose a tramp should object to being taken through the woods or fields every day by girls in feeble health?

Senator Quay will vote in favor of the Pennsylvania Prohibitory amendment. He says he regards the question "as one of morals and not of politics." It goes without saying that Quay regards a question of politics as not one of morals.

It is announced that hereafter an American flag will be kept flying at all times above the White House. Whether this reform is the outcome of Gov. Foraker's recent visit to Washington is not known. It is rumored, however, that he has expressed his willingness to fly to the capital at once if any flies settle upon the National emblem adorning the White House.

During the last twenty five years Queen Victoria has captured 447 agricultural prizes with stock from her Windsor farms. She takes great interest in cattle shows and is a good judge of Shorthorns and Jerseys. At Windsor on Abergeildie farm and at Osborne she has herds of cattle worthy a royal owner. The park at Osborne is now stocked with a picturesque herd of West Highland cattle. It is strange that Victoria, fond of cattle as she is, should care but little for horses. She does not even admire a pony of brandy.

Violet ink is becoming distinctly the authors' ink. It is curious how general the use is spreading among authors. The poet Whittier rarely uses ink of any other color, and manuscripts or notes from his pen in black ink are only occasional. Mr. Hewells is entirely given to employing violet ink in all his work, and Julian Hawthorne only uses black when his favorite ink is unobtainable. Business and social letters written by the Century editor, Richard Watson Gilder, are invariably in violet ink. Charles Dudley Warner's passion for the color extends to the violet flower. It is extremely seldom that any "copy" by him is seen in black ink. Bayard Taylor always dipped his pen in a stand of violet ink when in his study. Among women writers, strange enough, the practice does not seem so marked. Mrs. Custar is given to it and likewise is Augusta Evans Wilson and Grace Greenwood. One explanation of the practice is undoubtedly that the violet is softer to the eye, and this is an important consideration with people who constantly use the pen.

If the Turkish Government consents it is probable that Palestine will be invaded by locomotives, and that before long the conductor will have an opportunity of calling out "Galilee; all out for Galilee," and in good Turkish, "Damascus passengers will please retain their seats till the train comes to a full stop." Application has been made by Joseph Elias, formerly Government engineer of Lebanon, for a commission for a railway from Haifa, on the Mediterranean, about midway between Tyre and Caesarea, by way of Lake Galilee over River Jordan to Damascus. Authority for the navigation of the lake and a priority of right for the extension of a line over any other applicant for three years is asked for. The line is to follow the River Kishon for six miles, going within three and three-fourth miles of Nazareth, and then ascending the valley to the water sheds of the Jordan. The line will proceed along the northwest of the lake close to the plain of Genesaret, up the Jordan, crossing it about two miles below Merim. From that point the line turns towards the east to Damascus, a distance of 105 miles from the coast. Permission is also asked to go on with the Palmyra into Aleppo.

Frank James, the great and only Frank James, of border romance fame, is in Nashville in attendance upon the races. He created a sensation at the Maxwell House when he entered to buy a pool or two. The auctioneer found his patrons suddenly leaving him, and for a moment the cause could not be ascertained. The explanation came quickly, however. The famous visitor became the target for all eyes; indeed, the crowd stared at him so persistently and gathered about him so densely that he betook himself to a quiet room, where he spent a half hour with old friends whom he had known in Nashville many years ago. As is generally known now, Frank James lived near Nashville, on the White's Creek pike, from 1877 to 1883. He was known by the name of Woodson, and as a farmer and horse trader, enlivening his nights now and then with gambling when faro was the ruling sport. He was well acquainted with the police, who never dreamed that their genial friend was the much discussed Frank James. He had a pleasant chat with Chief of Detectives Bob Porter at the Maxwell House. Frank James is now as free a man as walks American soil. He is making a specialty of the turf, and is a bold and successful bettor. He wears his years well. In manner he is notably quiet, but the pair of steel gray eyes beneath the soft white felt hat which rests on the now gray hair tell of a daring spirit. He will be in Nashville the entire race meeting.

Down and still down go the wages of the iron workers and coal miners in all parts of the country. What an oversight it was in the workingmen who have been bamboozled into voting to keep up the war tariff in order to secure "American wages for American men" that they did not have inserted in the law a clause compelling the protected mine owners and manufacturers to "divide fairly" the bounties of the tariff. As it is, the monopolists get all the meat and throw to their workingmen the bone.

A free application of soft soap to a fresh burn almost instantly removes the fire from the flesh. If the injury is very severe, as soon as the pain ceases, apply linseed oil, and then dust over with fine flour. When this covering dries hard, repeat the oil and flour dressing until a good coating is obtained. When the latter dries, allow it to stand until it cracks and falls off, as it will do in a day or two, and a new skin will be found to have formed where the skin was burned.
