

FOUL MISREPRESENTATION.

The Oregonian writes an article defining Harrison's policy with regard to removals from office in the class of officials appointed for a term of four years. It is said that the president has decided not to remove any democrats unless for cause, but will let them serve their terms out. This is simply occupying the ground that Cleveland camped on four years ago. But what we desire to call particular attention to is the conclusive evidence in the article referred to that the Oregonian has degenerated into a mere partisan organ, regarding the acts of its own party as right under all circumstances, and that of the democrats as wrong under all circumstances. This is bad enough, but when it resorts to open, palpable falsehoods to create a reputation for its own party at the expense of the reputation of Cleveland and the democratic party, it places itself beyond the pale of recognition as decent or respectable. Striving to eke out some credit for Harrison for adopting the policy above spoken of, it says: "Cleveland slaughtered nearly the whole line of republican officials without mercy, but his example is not to be followed." Now, no fact relative to Cleveland's administration is more clearly established than the one, that, as a rule, he permitted republican officials, appointed for a term of four years, to serve their terms out. He removed when the public service required it. The Oregonian knows this truth as well as any one, but as a mere time-serving organ, lost to all sense of obligation to tell the truth, it publishes the above falsehood to make a little cheap reputation for Harrison. The public are not so easily deceived. Harrison to-day is following the example set by Cleveland, in allowing the present postmaster in Portland to serve his term out. Cleveland permitted every republican postmaster in Oregon, appointed for a term of four years, to serve his term out. So far Harrison has removed none of the democratic postmasters from such offices in Oregon. If he shall continue to do so until the end of his term he will simply have done what Cleveland taught him to do. What was true of Cleveland's course in Oregon was true of it throughout the country at large. This the Oregonian knows full well, but, with alacrity, it reports to the above falsehood in order to break the force of the fact that Cleveland's policy on the subject of removals meets such hearty approval from the country that Harrison is compelled to follow in his (Cleveland's) footsteps.

President Harrison's action in remitting the fine of an Indiana democrat convicted some time ago of election frauds is a proof that the President has a remnant of conscience left in partisan matters.

With hundreds of indicted republicans in Indiana set free by the invented technicalities of a political judge belonging to their party, it would be a marked injustice to keep in confinement a solitary democrat convicted through the partisan zeal of the same judge.

The remission of the fine in Coy's case calls attention to another shameful inconsistency in Judge Wood's rulings in election cases. This jurist, who is now being pushed for a seat on the Supreme Bench, threw out of court a few weeks ago a large number of indictments against republicans for crimes in the last election on the ground that it was necessary to charge and to prove that the bribery or fraud was actually practiced in connection with the election of Congressmen. Upon the Coy trial, a year and a half ago, this same judge decided that the indictment was good under the Federal law, although there was no charge or proof that the vote of the candidate for Congress had been tampered with, the alteration of returns affecting alone the candidates for criminal judge.

If there is to be one law for rascals and another for democratic rogues it is perhaps creditable to the President to do what he can to correct the injustice. But what hope is there of honest elections in Indiana when "dishonors are easy" and crimes against the suffrage go unpunished?

The American crop of wheat does not determine the question of prices. Results of harvest around the world must be considered, and so far as we know the outlook is less promising than last year. The Indian production is less than last year. Australia much less. The Argentine Republic a bad failure. Russia unfavorable reports. So far as reports from foreign crops to date are concerned, they certainly encourage fair prices for our crops.

It is estimated that there are 750,000 binders in use in the United States and that they will use an average of one hundred and forty pounds of twine each, or over 55,000 tons in the aggregate. Six cents a pound advance on twine would cost the farmers over six million of dollars.

Grit is a good thing, an essential thing, but there must be brains to hold the lines. Holding on to a bad thing is just as disastrous as letting go of a good thing. Be sure you are not fooling with a buzz saw and then don't worry about a few suspender buttons.

A republican exchange contains an article headed "Farmers, Think." This is a very imprudent advice for a republican to give. When the farmers of the country begin to think to some purpose the days of the republican party will be numbered.

DISCARD THE PRACTICE.

Two of the Roseburg papers are now, and have been for some time, engaged in a vigorous presentation of the defects and shortcomings in the personal conduct of their respective editors. Some days ago the Plaindealer alleged that Mr Bell, editor of the Review, was a partner in interest in a saloon in the Chemekete hotel, Salem while he had charge of that eating house. Mr Bell denied the charge in the most earnest and emphatic way, and publishes letters from C H Monroe, his partner in the hotel business, T S Wells, the chief clerk, H A Newell, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Salem, R J Hendricks, editor of the Statesman, and Ladd & Bush, proprietors of the Chemekete, all declaring that Bell had no connection with the saloon at all. Bell has fully exonerated himself from the charge and it would be a manly act on the part of Bro. Benjamin to withdraw the charge and make the amende honorable. The truth is that ventilating each others private characters is not a profitable scheme for these brethren of the Roseburg press. It satiates the morbid appetites of a few people, but is unpalatable to the decent patrons of these papers.
