SIGNIFICANT.

The result of the election in Pennsylvania on the prohibitory amendment is strikingly significant. When the result is considered in the light of the fact that Pennsylvania casts a larger republican majority than any other state in the Union, it will begin to dawn upon the benighted minds of a certain class that the pretense heretofore made, that that party is, par excellence, the friends of prohibition has finally been exploded. The democratic party, as a party, has never made any pretense, nor given out any promise to the prohibitionists that it would enact prohibitory measures, while on the other hand, promises innumerable have been made by republicans to third party prohibition-ists that if they would remain in the republican party that party in return would give them all the legislation they wanted. How well they have kept these pledges may be seen in the results of the amendment elections held in Michigan, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

[The Solomon Valley, (Kansas.) Democrat thrusts a keen sword. Hear him: "Preach prohibition, but say nothing against usury. Decry harlotry but don't mention gossip. Portray the wickedness of murder, but don't attack mob law. Rebuke larceny, but don't criticize false weights or cheating at the counter. Score the democrat who drinks, but hide your face behind a paper when a republican raises the bottle to his mouth. Follow these directions and you will strike the popular chord. Denounce trusts but stay by the tariff."
