

The Democrat.

To Adam, Paradise was home; to the good among his descendants, home is paradise.

The water rental of Scotland for nets and rods is estimated at present at not less than £190,000 per annum.

A young woman of Columbia, Ga., has made a crazy quilt out of Louisiana lottery tickets that failed to "connect" with the prize wheel. The numbers are worked in silk of beautiful colors.

It is a fact worth pondering that, though the night falls around us it never breaks, where as the day breaks but never falls. We offer this delicate fancy to some struggling aspirant for poetical honors.

Rice Boyd, of Uniontown, Pa., has been pasturing his cattle on a $90,000 coal field, never suspecting its value. He sold it to a sharp neighbor a few days ago for $800, and the purchaser disposed of it at once for $90,000.

Every stag that falls in a Scottish forest, it has been calculated, costs the lessee from £35 to £50 ($175 to $250); but, as what is termed "butcher's meat," these animals, if placed on the market, would very likely not yield to those who kill them more than sixpence per pound weight.

It is now asserted that the victory gained by the Republicans in the late municipal election at Peoria was intended as a delicate compliment from the great whisky producers to their eminent customer, Vice President Morton.

Pension Commissioner Raum is more discreet than his predecessor, Tanner, though his orders may mean the same thing. He cautions his subordinates that "great care must be exercised in the rejection of applications for pensions," which means, being translated, that they must not be rejected if it be possible to avoid doing so. That was just what Tanner said, only he put it more directly.

The Oregonian is much disturbed at the new turn the tariff question has taken in New England. It deprecates the arguments made use of by the protectionists in that section,—that is, "that the duty on wool gives the producer no increase of price, but rather that it causes the price to decline." The Oregonian calls this "juggling" and propitiously so, but that paper seems to forget that a favorite and stand by argument, depended upon by protectionists when answering the arguments and protests of the consumer, is that to protect a manufactured article will result in a decrease rather than an increase of the price. The protection papers have uniformly used this argument to satisfy the non-protected people of the country. But is it not juggling? If protecting a manufactured article makes it sell cheaper, then the manufacturer will not want protection, and yet this juggling and nonsense is by many protectionists deemed a good and conclusive argument in favor of "protection."

The Mountaineer says the president's message is "both able and exhaustive upon all subjects in which the people of the nation are interested." This is a remarkable statement. On the subject of tariff reduction and reform in which the people are as deeply, as more deeply, interested than any other likely to come before congress, the president is neither able, exhaustive, nor candid. He says he recommends a revision of the tariff law, both in its administrative features and in the schedule, but as to how the revision is to be made he is as silent as if he had said nothing at all upon the subject. Let it be observed that he favors revision, not reduction. A revision of the tariff schedules might be made by increasing the rate of duties on every article now on the dutiable list, and it is not unfair to presume that the president means this, were it not modified by the vague hint that certain articles might safely be put on the free list. No, the president does not even suggest to congress that duties should be increased or reduced on a single article. In this there is lack of ability, exhaustiveness, candor and courage. The message is full of timidity from first to last. On the tariff, the silver question and nearly all others vagueness and lack of courage are leading characteristics.

A new use for the phonograph has been discovered. A teacher of languages, whose admirable accent has brought him many pupils, resort to the phonograph wherever he finds it as an assistant tutor. For instance, he will talk slowly in Parsian French a page of some good author in that tongue into the phonograph and instruct his pupils to read the passage aloud while the phonograph prompts him with proper pronunciation.

Bob Ingersoll's old home in Peoria is to be the site of a $90,000 Y. M. C. A. hall.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

LOST.—Either on the road from Sweet Home to Crawfordville, or from Sweet Home to Albany, a real Morocco pocketbook, looks rather new, has a calendar for 1883.
