D P THOMPSON VS THE WILLAMETTE.

S M L & Mfg Co. 15 Oregon Reports 604.

The opinion rendered by the supreme court in this case is a valuable, as well as an interesting one. It is a very able commentary on the character of D P Thompson, republican candidate for governor, written by Chief Justice Lord in his most epigrammatic style. If the opinion were in the hands of every voter in the state, but few votes would be cast for this very ambitious financier, political adventurer and grasping money getter. The facts may be briefly recapitulated. Thompson was receiver of the Holliday estate, appointed by the court. As receiver, amongst other things, he held three-fifths of all the stock of the defendent corporation, and he had no personal or individual stock whatever. By virtue of holding stock in such corporation, he was elected a director, and by the votes of his two associates in the directory who held their seats by virtue of the stock held by Thompson as receiver, he was made president. The by-laws of the corporation provided a salary for the president of $250 per month. On this state of facts he set up a bogus claim to the salary for his own use and benefit, which claim was thus disposed of by the Chief Justice, a man of David's own political faith, but whose personal conduct is guided by an entirely different code of morals. Judge Lord in rendering the opinion of the court said: "It is said that he abstained from voting for himself; "did not cause himself to be elected," but that the office of president was conferred upon him by the voluntary votes of the other two directors. Whether he voted or not for himself, he could only vote in his representative and not in his individual capacity; and it was, as such, he was elected and performed the services. his right to thus act being based on the shares he represented for the estate in litigation and of which he was receiver. Pending the litigation, his relation to the stock, so to speak, was that of the true owner, and he was trustee for him. As that stock constituted a part of the subject matter in litigation while it was in his charge he owed it such duties as the nature of the property and its profitable management required, and, as a consequence, his compensation as receiver included such duties or services as are incident to its custody and his office, and which he may have performed in respect to it. In a word, whatever service he may have performed, although done as president, it was done by virtue of his title as receiver, and for such services the admitted facts show he has been paid. It may be true that he was not required to act as president; that Welder might have been elected to the office, as he did, in fact, perform substantially its duties, but if he undertook to discharge its duties he acted in his official capacity, and whatever benefit or emolument resulted, it belonged to the estate which he represented and entitled him to no additional charge as receiver much less as an individual." There we have a full delineation of the character and kind of man D P Thompson is. Was any public man ever so neatly pilloried on account of his covetous, grasping avaricioisness? There is the picture of D P Thompson drawn with friendly hand, but it is fearfully true to his nature. Here was a man worth a million dollars receiving $500 per month for his service as receiver of a badly crippled estate attempting to grab $250 per month more on a flimsy technicality. Scan the whole matter crefully, gentle reader and then ask yourself in candor if you want such a man for governor.

We have been shown a copy of Webster's Weekly published at Reidsville N. C. which gives an account of a negro mass meeting called for the purpose of expressing the views of colored voters with regard to Harrison's administration and the republican party in general. The speakers denounced Harrison and his party in the most unmeasured terms, advising voters to quit voting the republican ticket. Verily the g. o. p. is in the valley of the shadow of death and forgetfulness.

I have just received a large invoice of lace curtains, ranging in price from one to nine dollars a pair, scrim, curtain nets, etc. Also a line of curtain poles and furniture covering. SAMUEL E YOUNG.

MERCURIAL.

The Portland Mercury, a republican paper gives Seventeen, Bank Thompson the following mercurial jabs between the ribs:

"Hon D P Thompson is not in sympathy with monopolists. He gobbled up seventeen national banks in Oregon to keep them out of the monopolists clutches."

"D P Thompson has already begun denials of charges made against him. He says that he owns no stock in the Willamette locks. This was to be expected. He will probably soon deny that he gave $10 each to the Johnstown flood and Seattle fire sufferers."

"Lotan smiles so sweetly when he reads Banker Thompson's declaration that he will not be controlled by others if elected governor. It was arranged between them, before the nomination, that Thompson would make this statement and stick to it. He is living up to his bargain."

"The laborers of Oregon will no doubt remember Hon D P Thompson's public spirit. The building of the Hunt railroad will give employment to thousands of men, not only in constructing the road, but in the development of the city caused by its construction. The capitalists of Portland, to secure the road, were required to purchase $2,000,000 of its bonds. This they did, but the name of D P Thomson, owner of seventeen national banks, does not appear among the investors. He did, however last summer, contribute $10 to the Seattle sufferers and a like amount to the unfortunate Johnstown people."
