

THE DAILY DEMOCRAT.

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, June 2, 1890.
Senators Sherman and Allison are at logger heads over the crazy quilt hodge-podge known as the McKinley tariff bill, and Senator Allison is reported to be preparing a speech to be delivered against the bill on the floor of the senate, should he fall, as now seems probable, to carry his point in the Finance Committee. In the meantime the party leaders seem to have gotten the whip hand of the kickers, certainly so far as the republicans of the committee are concerned, and the majority of the committee are working like beavers to get through with the bill, and up to date they have made no changes of importance. Some republicans say the bill will be reported in a week, but it is more probable that it will take four weeks to get through, allowing that harmony continues in the committee, which is by no means certain.

Speaker Reed is getting a good deal of cheap notoriety because he issued an order prohibiting the sale of drinks in the House restaurant. The only effect of the order has been to stop the sale of drinks over the bar, and to put the proprietor to the trouble of serving liquor to his guests seated instead of standing, in the good old fashioned way. Sitting at table to take your whiskey is a Boston idea.

The fiery G. A. R. orator, whose feelings suffered excruciatingly because the people at Richmond chose to enjoy a harmless bit of sentiment by exhibiting the flag of Confederacy, was in his glory in this vicinity on Decoration day. He was quite numerous but also perfectly harmless. No sensible person does anything but laugh at him.

When Senator Stewart stated on the floor of the senate that Major Powell, director of the Geological Survey, was at the head of "a lying-in hospital for lame ducks," he struck the nail square on the head. The Geological Survey occupies large and luxuriously fitted up quarters, here, and no man has ever been able to put his hand upon anything tangible performed by that bureau, and it has long been a standing joke that only work performed by Major Powell and his assistants was in the nature of lobbying to get fancy appropriations through congress for themselves. These fellows call themselves scientists, and perhaps they are. They have certainly learned the science of living in style at the expense of the government. An investigation would amount to nothing unless the "pull" which Major Powell has so long and successfully had upon congress should fail to work.

Assistant Post-master General Clarkson, who has of late been posing as the special champion of the anti-civil service legion, has disgusted many of them by proving himself to be as great a humbug as the civil service law. Mr. Clarkson recently discovered that just as his official life was nearing its close, the postal service on the Pacific coast was needing an official inspection by him, and yesterday, having previously made arrangements with an obliging railroad official for the use of a private car, Mr. Clarkson started on his farewell junket. At Des Moines his family will join this model official who is doing his level best to reduce the treasury surplus. As soon as Mr. Clarkson gets tired of travelling over the Pacific slope he will return to Washington, and resign.

Senator Carlisle is the latest democratic states to give the Farmers Alliance some good advice. In reply to a letter from a gentleman in Alabama asking his views of the bill, which has been reported adversely by the House Committee on Ways and Means to providing for the establishment of subtreasuries for the storage of agricultural products, Mr. Carlisle says: "The farmers have been taxed so long for the benefit of other classes and have seen so much legislation for the aggrandizement of corporations and syndicates that their patience is exhausted, and finding it impossible, for the time being at least to abolish the system which has oppressed and despoiled the greatest industrial interests of the country, they are now demanding that the very policy, which they have heretofore denounced as unjust and ruinous shall be applied to the, or rather a part of them, for no scheme has yet been suggested that will operate alike upon all foreigners. But no evil can be corrected, no wrong can be righted by increasing its magnitude and extending the scope of its operation. There is but one effectual remedy for the evil which undoubtedly exists, and that is to reverse the policy which produced it."

Post-master General Wanamaker is earning the ill-will of all the small Washington pension agents, because he is allowing one large firm, which publishes a paper, to violate the postal laws in sending out copies of that paper. Like Mr. Wanamaker, the head of telegraphed concern was a large contributor to the republican campaign fund, which excuseth many things.

Sunnyside Fruit Farms.

Salem continues to grow and the building industry never was so actively pursued in this city before. This activity extends to the section adjoining the city, and each contributes to the others prosperity. This condition of affairs gives added value to those ten-acre fruit farms at Sunnyside, four miles south of Salem, for sale by the Oregon Land Co., and renders them increasingly desirable to those who wish to engage in any farm specialty.

A MISTAKE.

It is a mistake for farmers to be led into a notion that the business men in town are their enemies, or that they are reaping great profits. As a matter of fact the average merchant finds it pretty hard squeezing to get along, pay his bills and pay his help. Yet many a customer has been helped over a tight place by being furnished goods on time till crops come in. And when a subscription is started to build roads or reimburse the unfortunate man who has been turned out, it soon finds its way to town. Now suppose you could close up every store in town but one, how much would it improve the value of your farm. Would it benefit the farmers if all competition were done away with? The fact is the interests of the farmers and business men are identical, and he who attempts to prejudice one against the other is a disturber of confidence that should be mutual between all honest men.—Princeton News.
