

DAILY DEMOCRAT.

HIS 90TH BIRTHDAY.

Last Friday Mr. John Crabtree, of "The Forks," was 90 years of age. The event was duly celebrated by a gathering of relatives and friends, including five children, who spent the day in festivity. Mr. Crabtree is already well known to our citizens as a hearty old pioneer of the earlier days. The following poem read by Mrs. Moon, was a just tribute to a fine old gentleman:

Full twenty years your life has numbered Above the "three score years and ten,"
That God, who rules in love and mercy,
Allots unto the sons of men.
And still His gracious love permits us,
As children, neighbors, friends to gather
here,
To kindly greet you, and rejoice together
As we recount the blessings of the year.
A backward glance the mind might fity take,
And note the changes in these ninety years;
Well filled they are with trials, conflicts,
sorrows,
Close interwoven are the joys and hopes and fears.

First, memory paints in colors clear and bright
The happy boy within the "Old Virginia"
home,
And fancy almost catches mother's voice Implying blessings from the Lord upon her son.

You dream, a few years later on,
Of loving wife, the heart and home to bless.
The vows then spoken and the bride then won
Are still, of all the blessings of the years, the best.

Fair children came to further bless the home
And fill the heart and life with greater cheer;
Some of them have, long since, gone on before;
In memory though to-day are very near.
But why allow ourselves to backward look,
We cannot change the record if we could,
For greater blessing could not crown man's days
Than a long life nobly spent, in doing good.
Forward now look, where in the west
Life's setting sun fast sinks into the sea,
And, by its rays, dispelling every cloud that drifts
Between your mortal view and great Infinity.

Then upward let the eye of holy faith
Turn to the "Heavenly mansions" bright and fair,
That Christ, the son of God, who loves us
here,
Has gone, for all who love him to prepare.
And when the message comes to each of us
To cross death's rushing river, one by one,
May we all meet upon the other side and there
Find rest and joy, and peace—home.
