

WASHINGTON.

(From our regular correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20, 1890.

As usual, the republican administration and party are sailing under false colors. It has been decided by the bosses to have Mr Harrison issue a proclamation calling an extra session of congress to meet after the elections next month, and fearing its effect upon the voters they do not dare to have the proclamation issued until it will be too late to call the attention of the people to what it means. It means that having control of both the executive and legislative branches of the government the republicans have fully made up their minds to enact laws which will enable them to continue to control them, it means that, for the first time in the history of our government, congress is to meet in extra session for the sole purpose of perpetuating the power of a political party—the republican party; it means that the Force bill is to be passed and that the negro, backed by the United States Army, is to be put on top in the south, notwithstanding the remonstrances of thousands of northern business men who have invested their money in southern industries; it means that an unjust apportionment bill making it practically impossible for the democrats to elect a majority in either the house of representatives or the electoral college is to become a law; it means that hundreds of millions of dollars of the people's money is to go into the pockets of a ring already formed in anticipation of the passage of the ship subsidy bill; it means that the U. S. treasury is to be emptied into the pockets of the schemers, who have supplied the corruption fund used by Quay, Dudley, Clarkson & Co., to buy the election of Harrison and Morton and the republican majority in the present house of representatives, by means of appropriations of one kind and another. And that is not all it means; it means, if successful, the sounding of the death knell of the republic.

Mr Huston, of Indiana, who by the grace of Mr Benjamin Harrison, of the same state, is treasurer of the United States, drawing a salary of $6,000 a year has publicly served notice upon Mr Benjamin Harrison that he must not expect the support of the Indiana delegation to the republican national convention of 1892. But perhaps this notice will lose some of its effect when it is learned, as I have reason to believe it soon will be, that Mr Harrison had previously served notice upon Mr Huston that he must turn loose that $6,000 government tea.

Attorney General Miller has gone to Indiana to see if he cannot placate the republican opposition in that state to his going upon the supreme court bench as successor to the late Justice Miller. If he can quiet the "practical politicians" out there Mr Harrison will send his nomination to the senate as soon as it meets, if not, he gets left, as Mr Harrison's spinal column isn't strong enough to enable him to go against the "gang."

One would suppose that the civil service commission had suddenly gone out of existence to see the part taken by the big republican office holders in compelling the small fry to chip in their assessments to the campaign funds of the party. Public meetings of the various state republican associations are held almost nightly at which speeches are made by government officials, and published in full in the local papers, which are punishable under the civil service law, if the commissioners had nerve enough to see that the law was enforced. There is an open and public rivalry between the state associations of Ohio and Indiana to see which shall succeed in raising the most money for campaign uses among employees of the government, and the names, not only of those who have contributed, but of those who must contribute are openly read out at their meetings. In the meantime commissioner Roosevelt seems to be spending the most of his time since he returned from a six weeks vacation, during which his salary went right along and his travelling expenses were paid by the government, in telling fish stories. Many republicans openly express their disgust at the present condition of things in the departments here.

Commissioner of Pensions Raum has left his duties here. Refrigerator company and all, have gone on the stump for g. o. p. It would be in equally good taste to take a burglar from some state's prison to deliver lectures on honesty. Why not put ex-postmaster Wheat, of the house of representatives, on the stump?

Reut Matthews & Washburn's new ad this week.

A strong effort is being made by the Oregonians to secure the repeal of the mortgage tax law. The law should not be repealed. The correct principle of taxation is to tax a man for just what he is worth. If a capitalist loans money, the evidence of the debt due him should bear its just proportion of taxation. The Oregonians and the smaller fry shriek that such a course will keep capital out of the state. So let it be. Money is a good thing, but its use can be bought at too dear a price. Just as certain as wreck and ruin followed the boom in Southern California, will the day of reckoning come for Washington and for all states where capital dictates the law. Oregon's growth is not phenomenal nor of the mushroom character. We have a state of magnificent resources and our law makers should not give way to the feverish desire that money must be secured at any price. Tax mortgages and tax every thing that represents wealth. This is the current idea.—Roseburg Review.
