

STILL HARPING.

Owing to the tenacity with which the great leaders of the democracy, such as Thurman, Gorman, Vest, Cleveland, Hill, and others hold on to this life, the Oregonian is reduced to the necessity of varying its heretofore uniform practice of sitting like an expectant ghoul on the verge of the grave of some deceased democrat, and there, while the last sad rites of sepulture are being performed, glaze over another opportunity of satisfying its craving appetite to indulge in abusive slander of the silent dead, and now with demonic meanness indulges in similar abuse of the living. This time the object of its venom is United States Senator Voorhees of Indiana who has been re-elected senator which place he has so ably filled since 1877. Notwithstanding the fact that quite frequently since that date the republicans have carried that state they have never been able to defeat Voorhees who is one of the most popular men in that state. Every line of that paper's article is fraught with abundant proof that malicious partisan hate was the only motive that caused the editor of that sheet to write such an article. Words of truth, sobriety, candor, fair dealing, or honesty are absolutely unknown in it. That bitter, brutal hate that filled its editors' mind and heart when writing his ghoulish article on the death of Tilden, Hendricks, Seymour and other great democratic patriots who have folded their mantles around them and passed to the beyond, is the same that moves him to make this brutal, devilish attack upon Voorhees. It would be as impossible for that paper to confine itself to the truth when making these attacks upon democratic leaders as it would be for the devil himself to perform an act of religious devotion. Every one remembers the air of victory which that paper put on when writing of the death of McClellan, Hendricks, Seymour and others. This is its feeling toward a all democrats dead or alive, but especially the latter. But why not let him alone. He is joined irrevocably to his idol, hate, and will never be actuated by any other motive when speaking of democrats.

WHY MONEY IS TIGHT.

We hear continually the question, why is money so tight? The answer is plain and unmistakable. Democracy has got hold of the lower house of congress and small capitalists have got a scare on them in consequence and are holding on to their money; and the big capitalists are taking advantage of the scare to line their nests with a gold lining. But the people are beginning to perceive that the McKinley bill is not such a raw-head-and-bloody-bones as democracy has tried to make it appear, and ere long business will revive and all will be well.—Roseburg Plaindealer.

There is one great public functionary who seems to be utterly derelict in his duty. It is the foolkiller. For how could any loyal, faithful foolkiller permit any one to exist who would emit such slush as the above. The new democratic congress will not go into power for nearly a year.

NOT NEW.

The people of Oregon are enjoying the first-fruits of Jo-Simon. The receiver of the Oregon Improvement Company is President of the Senate. He appoints a committee on railroads, which select as its clerk C. N. Scott, receiver of the Oregonian East Side railway. If this keeps on a receiver for the republican party may be needed.—Capital Journal (Rep)

This is nothing new. The leaders of the republican party, (and throughout the country,) have made their party an auxiliary to railroad monopolies and monopolies in general. A few unsophisticated republicans may still be found who are surprised at this, but it is not new to democrats.

A DESERVED COMPLIMENT.

The Oregonian pays one junior senator, Hon Jeff Myers, the following deserved compliment:

Mr Myers is but 26 years of age. He was a member of the lower house two years ago. As a senator, he is the youngest man who ever occupied the place in Oregon. He is a bright young gentleman, a fluent talker, and a member who will make friends wherever he goes.

"I was born in Oregon and proud of my state," was his last exclamation.

It appears that there are two Farmer's Alliances in the field. Confusion will be avoided if it is remembered that the alliance south is the National Farmer's Alliance and Industrial Union, while in the north and northwest the Alliance is simply the National Farmer's Alliance. The two orders have different administrations, and the northern and western Alliance is less radical in its views than the south. Each Alliance claims the exclusive right to the style and title of "The National Farmer's Alliance."

The balloting in the legislature of Illinois for senator continues to result as follows: Palm- ar, democrat, 101, Oglesby, republican, 100 and Streeter the farmers Alliance man 3. This is the full strength of the three parties.
