

Daily Democrat.

SOME WRANGLING.

The feelings of the Oregonian are very much disturbed over the fact that some of the "rockribbed" republican senators from New England object to that paper being quoted as a republican paper. It seems that during the discussion of the Force bill some republican opposed to the bill was giving the names of the republican papers that were opposing the bill. Among others the Oregonian was named as opposed to the bill, whereupon Hoar and Edmunds objected that it was not a republican paper, "not being sound on protection." Bill McKinley, the famous McKinley bill man, at once vouched for its soundness. The Oregonian insists that the real cause of the objection of these "old people" (Hoar, Edmunds and others,) to its being quoted as a republican paper is found in the fact that it insists that if the protection system is to be maintained at all the eastern manufacturers shall not be the sole beneficiaries of it. Now all this wrangling among brethren who should dwell together in unity is the result of the felicitous ease with which the Oregonian faces about on public questions. McKinley when he vouched for that paper's "soundness" referred to its tariff articles published in 1888, which every one must admit are models of republican orthodoxy on the tariff question. Grandmother Hoar evidently had in mind the brilliant, and logically unanswerable free trade articles published in that paper during the years 1883-4-5-6. So that both McKinley and Hoar had ample reasons for the statements made by them. But what an attitude for the Oregonian.

FAITHFUL PUBLIC SERVANTS.

The Oregonian makes the following reference to the members of the legislature mentioned:

Senators Weatherford, of Linn, and Veatch, of Lane counties, and Representative Holmes, of Marion, Coleman and Jennings of Lane counties, are looked upon by the farmers of the Willamette valley as especially zealous in their interests. They are in receipt of many expressions of confidence from their constituents, and on Saturday last the Santiam grange, one of the largest and most influential branches of that order in Linn county, passed a series of resolutions indorsing these five members. Senator Weatherford is commended for his bill to exempt homesteads from attachment and execution sales, and for that to regulate the manner of and terms upon which foreign corporations may do business in this state. Senator Veatch is warmly praised for his bills to repeal the railroad commission; to regulate freights and fare on railroads and to reduce toll to 25 cents per ton on all freight passing through the locks at Oregon City. Representative Jennings, who opposes all appropriations from the state treasury, is endorsed for "closely guarding the interests of the taxpayers of Oregon." Representative Coleman's bill to reduce the legal rate of interest, and Holmes's anti-railroad commission bill are commended, and the Linn county delegation is urged to support these measures and to oppose any appropriation for the World's Fair, or for wagon roads.

It is remarkable how McKinley and his bill labored to hoodwink the farmers of the northwest. For the purpose of making him believe that he, too, was to receive his full share of the profits of protection, McKinley raised the duty on corn from 10 to 15 cents per bushel. This was to protect American corn raisers from importations of corn from foreign countries. Let us see. The report of Secretary Windom shows that the importations of corn last year, (that is for the year ending June 30, 1889) was 2,401 bushels. As corn sold then for 15 cents a bushel the value of this corn amounted to the enormous sum of $360.15. And all this is paraded as being a great protection to the farmer. These Bourbon leaders failed to deceive the wily farmer, though.

If all tales be true, says an exchange, the seductive influence of the lobby is not wholly absent at the present session of the legislature. One may almost hear a legislator rise in his seat and remark:

"I hear a lion in the lobby roar; Pray, Mr Speaker, shall I shut the door? Or shall we open the door and let him in, And then all try to get him out again?"

There is quite a change in public sentiment among those who in the morning started out to promote county division. This is not only true among the taxpayers in the "Forks" but among those about Albany who were encouraging it because they had an ulterior purpose to subserve. The candid, mature consideration of the matter in all its bearings will inevitably lead to the conclusion that division is antagonistic to the best interests of both the proposed as well as the old county. The longer people discuss the matter the fewer will be those who favor it except among a few who have personal interests to promote. Let Linn, the pride of her people remain intact.
