

IMMENSE RICHES.

A few weeks ago the entire world was startled by the news that Gustave Rothschild had lost $25,000,000 in various speculative ventures, and that he had even attempted suicide in the presence of his misfortune.

No one knows, it is true, how much the Rothschild fortune is exactly, but it is safe to say that it exceeds $1,000,000,000, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

In the great storm of 1857, when for a few days George Peabody's credit was gone, when Baring Bros. were anxiously surveying the wreckage all around them, when a hundred leading mercantile and banking firms of London were scudding under bare poles, Rothschilds alone showed no distress.

Whence comes this mountain of wealth, this purse without apparent bottom? There is nothing in the "Arabian Nights" more wonderful than the rise of the Rothschild's family; and yet there was no magic in it—nothing but thrift and patience, and the watching of opportunities.

Having at last amassed sufficient capital he returned to the Judengasse and started as a money-lender under the sign of the Red Shield. In 1812 he died worth $5,000,000. This fortune, which he intrusted to his five sons, is now estimated over $1,000,000,000 and is still growing like a snowball.

The adventure of the unlucky Gustave de Rothschild brings the Paris branch of the family rather prominently into view. The first of these Paris Rothschilds was Baron Solomon. Solomon's brother, Baron James de Rothschild, took charge of the Paris house in 1813.

The Journal of Salem creates a tempest in a teapot by tashing Governor Penneyer for appointing a national bank official to the office of attorney general of the state. It is not true that Hon Geo E Chamberlain is cashier of a national bank, nor was he when he accepted the office of attorney general.

GIVES ITSELF AWAY.

The Oregonian, and all protection organs for that matter, has a happy faculty of giving itself away when attempting to palliate tariff burdens. It says:

The adoption of a tariff for a revenue only would put an end to discussion of the question whether a tariff is a tax. Every tariff imposed upon the pure revenue principle is a direct tax upon the consumer.

In the same article that paper with unusual candor admits that the object of a protective tariff is to limit imports. Now to limit imports is to increase the price of home products. This increase of the price of a home product is paid of course by the consumer. It is paid to the manufacturer of the home product. It is a tax pure and simple.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

PAYNE, County Clerk.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK! STOP IT NOW, SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE. I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over when I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when Providence sent Dr. Heiley with his OREGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days I am happy to state that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.
