

Daily Democrat.

THEY AND NOW.

Since the nomination of McKinley, the Oregonian has taken unto itself much delight in defending the beauties of McKinleyism and showing up the great benefits to the people resulting from the passage of the McKinley tariff law. If there is one thing that stands out as a peculiar characteristic in the course of the Oregonian above another, it is its great lack of "harmony" with itself, its persistent inconsistencies.

Compare its opinion of McKinleyism now with its opinion in the spring of 1890 when the McKinley bill was practically completed. In April 1890 in an article headed "Look Out For Squalls" when it warned the republican party of the shoals upon which it was drifting, it said:

"It (the McKinley bill) undertakes to bring about the necessary reduction of the revenue by indirect and clumsy methods, which diminish the possible benefit to the consumer."

Just what the DEMOCRAT has insisted on all the time. The promoters of the McKinley bill never seriously pretended that it would benefit the consumer. They pretended that it would help the farmer but they knew it would not. It resulted as they knew it would, in benefit to the manufacturer.

"It shows a too tender care for the interests of the manufacturing monopolist and offers rural consumers a petty tariff on better and eggs instead of a reduction upon the manufactured goods he has to buy."

Indeed that is just what democrats have all along said about the bill. "Too tender a care for the interests of manufacturing monopolists" indeed. If this were so why so much defense of the bill now?

"It adds to the cost of canned goods by increasing the duty on tin plate, and stops the repeal of the sugar duty just where it would begin to affect the profits of the sugar trust and benefit the consumer. It increases the duty on wool because the wool growers are organized and powerful."

There you have it. The duty on wool was increased, not because the best interests of the country demanded it, but because the wool growers were an organized power in politics.

It promises protection to the American producer with one voice and whispers of reciprocity treaties with Spanish America to the eastern importers with another. It shifts and palters, traffics and evades, doubles, hesitates and is lost. It is a bill to catch campaign contributions, not to attract.

Such was the opinion of the Oregonian of the McKinley bill no longer since than April 1890. It stands by McKinley and his bill with a zeal worthy the zeal of a christian in defense of his religion. Either it was not honest and candid in its view then or it is not now. No man can read the article of the Oregonian of April 25, 1890, in the light of the election returns of last November, and have the shadow of a doubt of that paper's honesty and candor while writing it. We leave others to judge of that paper's motives in zealously defending McKinleyism.

The Wool and Cotton Reporter, a trade journal, published at Philadelphia, devoted exclusively to the wool, woolen goods, cotton, and cotton goods trade in reviewing the clothing trade says:

Some of the clothiers complain that many of the domestic goods which they have purchased are not turning out as well as they did last year, that on certain lines the goods delivered have not been up to the samples shown by the agents and commission men. The result is that they have given a good many cancellations of orders, and unless there is an improvement in this respect there are likely to be more cancellations.

This confirms what has heretofore been said that woolen manufacturers are daily increasing the amount of shoddy used in the manufacture of goods, and that it is only shoddy goods that are cheap. All wool goods are dearer than before the passage of the McKinley bill.

Before J. Sloan Fassett was seriously suggested as a candidate for governor of New York some one referred to him as a suitable candidate for the republicans to make. Replying he said:

Roswell P. Flower, is to be the democratic candidate for governor, and no republican can beat Flower. Some of my newspaper friends and some of my newspaper enemies have endeavored to make people believe that I wanted to succeed Mr. Hill and that I would have no difficulty in securing the republican gubernatorial nomination. I don't care to be sacrificed, and I have no ambition to lead a foolish life.

We thus have Fassett's opinion of his chances of success.

Lieutenant Governor Jones, of New York, will fight his party ticket. He wanted the democrats to nominate him for governor instead of Flower. He is a mere bolter and malcontent and will have very little influence. He says:

"Continued subservience," says he, "but makes the condition too degrading to be quietly borne by American citizens. There is but one way to degrade these usurpers. Temporary defeat of the party will be harmless, compared with the effects of their control for the welfare of the state and the interest of the democratic party. My duty is to oppose the election of the nominees of the Saratoga convention to such extent as may be within my power, and in such manner as may seem to accomplish that purpose."

Object glasses for microscopes are now made in Germany of glass that contains phosphoric and boracic acid. It is stated that with lenses made of this glass an object one twenty-thousandth of an inch in diameter can be distinctly seen.

Klein Bros. have a large and choice stock of boots and shoes for sale at reasonable prices. Do not invest in foot wear until you have seen their stock and the elegant plain at their store.

Gov. Campbell made his opening speech at Sidney, Ohio, on last Thursday. He said McKinley had dodged the tariff question and had made the silver question paramount. He charged the republican leaders of the state with having made concentrated efforts to force down the tariff issue in the campaign. He then took up the record of Major McKinley on the silver question, and charged him with having voted for free coinage as far back as 1877. The free silver men had claimed McKinley as their champion about the time of the passage of the silver certificate act of 1890.

Inquiries are frequently made as to how the parties stand in congress. The Fifty-first congress had 177 republican members of the house, 154 democrats and 1 independent republican. In the Fifty-second the house will stand, according to the result of last November's election: Democrats, 236; republicans, 87; alliance, 8.

At Waltham, Mass., a single pound of steel costing fifty cents is manufactured into 100,000 screws, which are worth $11. They look about like iron filings, and it needs a microscope to distinguish them as screws.

The works of watches are now plated with palladium, which is a whiter, lighter and more fusible metal than platinum. About one-seventeenth of a grain of palladium will, by electrical deposition, coat the works of an ordinary watch.

A dispatch from London says Rev Mr. Spurgeon, who has been progressing favorably, has had a relapse, and is again in a precarious condition.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS.

OH, MY BACK! STOP IT NOW, SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over, unable to get up, or to put on my clothes, like kind Providence sent Dr. Henley, with his ORIGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.
