

TIN PLATE FRAUD.

Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, of Indiana, is a leading light in the prohibition army of the west. For some time she has been making speeches for the prohibition ticket in Ohio. She recently visited the alleged tin-plate works at Piqua, O., and at a prohibitionist rally in Boston the other evening she gave the following account of her experience. After describing the much-heralded tin-making trip of Mr. McKinley, when, in the presence of hurrahing workmen, he dipped a piece of steel, rolled in the same mill, in a pot of tin wash and then held it triumphantly up as an example of the triumph of protection, she said:

"I was taken to the tin-plate mills of Piqua and said to the manager, by whom I was kindly received in his office, 'I have come to settle for myself the question whether tin-plate is made in the city of Piqua or not. I want to know if these pesky democrats are telling awful falsehoods about this tin-plate mill. I want to see for myself. Will you kindly let me see the product of this mill?'"

"Standing in his office and by his desk, he picked up a piece of tin about 18x24 inches, held it up and said, 'Madam, this is our product.'"

"I asked: 'Is that your product?' (Great laughter and applause.)"

"Well," he said, "madam, it's all we have on hand just now—(more laughter)—would you not like to write your autograph on it? Here's Mr. McKinley's autograph and the names of some friends of his."

"I said: 'Oh, no. I want you to allow me to make a piece of tin-plate here today, so that I can send it to my husband as a memento, because Mr. McKinley made a piece and sent it to his wife—(laughter)—and I want to have the same privilege.' I added: 'You must have had a great many orders to have your stock so exhausted.' (Great merriment.)"

"He said: 'Yes, we have had a large number of orders, so our stock is exhausted.'"

"How many boxes can you produce in a day?'"

"Thinking for a moment he said: 'You know this factory is quite young—only about thirty days old.'"

"Yes," I said, "established since the campaign began in Ohio. (Great laughter and applause.) Exists mostly on paper, does it not, Mr. Manager?'"

"With a slight twinkle in his eye and a smile he said: 'I think we could produce twenty boxes in a day. We hoped to do that much.'"

"Very well," said I, "won't you please take me and let me see the size of the boxes?'"

"Well," said he, "we have no boxes on hand just now." (Loud laughter.)

"Won't you let me go and see where the boxes are made and the measurement from which you make the boxes?'"

"Well," he said, "we have no boxes in process of construction."

"What," said I, "a business that is so rushed that you have had your stock exhausted and your boxes gone and you are not having any more made? Why, I said, 'the advertising this establishment is receiving has certainly given you a wonderful boom in business. I should think it would be good policy to keep it up. But if I cannot see the boxes, won't you take me to the furnace where Mr. McKinley stood and let me stand there, too? I want to be honored, and I think it would be an honor to the prohibition party to let me stand in the tracks of Mr. McKinley. And won't you bring me those tongs, for I want to grasp them as Mr. McKinley did.'"

"So he took me through the room where they are in the habit of washing corrugated iron to give it the tin process. He there showed me a furnace. It consists of an old-fashioned soap kettle set in a brick casing. Kettle and furnace, all told, were not over three feet across and eighteen inches high; and this was the boiling caldron over which Mr. McKinley bent his many forms. (Loud and prolonged laughter.)"

"And when the tongs were brought to me by the manager, with a broad smile rippling over his face, I asked him if I might not buy them and frame. (More laughter.) He could not part with them, but he said he should frame the piece of tin which Mr. McKinley had made."

"I said, 'Please let me make a piece of tin.'"

"The kettle seemed to be covered with ashes from a coal bin, and I saw in it what looked like melted lead, and when I asked to dip a piece of steel in it they assured me that the fires were out and it was not in a molten condition. So I was deprived of the honor of presenting tonight a piece of tin made in the United States."

"I stand here tonight to say that the political party which is reduced to such methods of deception and to bringing up such an issue as that—that when a man will resort to such a barefaced fraud as that whole affair was, telegraphed all over this country and written up in column after column, especially in the republican papers—that when the republican party is reduced to such straits as that for an issue, it ought to be hurled from power by a self-respecting constituency. (Great applause.)"

"I pronounce it the most outrageous fake and fraud that was ever perpetrated upon a reading public. The whole tin-plate mill of Piqua, that has made what is the issue today in the Ohio campaign, and what is supposed to be the issue in 1892 for the republican party, never cost $75,000."

told outside of the price of the kettle—(laughter)—and it only shows the dishonest methods that are practiced today while the party whip is wielded over the shoulders of an idolatrous people."

The Road to Wealth. Cannot be successfully traveled without good health. To reach wealth or any coveted position in life requires the full possession and operation of all the faculties kind nature has endowed us with. These conditions cannot exist unless the physical being is in perfect working order, and this is impossible when the liver and spleen are torpid, thus obstructing the secretions, causing indigestion and dyspepsia, with all of their accompanying horrors.

DR. HENLEY'S English Dandelion Tonic exerts a powerful influence over the liver, excites its healthy action, resolves its chronic engorgements, and promotes the secretions; cures indigestion and constipation, sharpens the appetite, tones up the entire system, and makes life worth living.

SICK

Head-Aches.

Sick-headaches are the outward indications of derangements of the stomach and bowels. As Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla is the only bowel regulating preparation of Sarsaparilla, it is seen why it is the only appropriate Sarsaparilla in sick-headaches. It is not only appropriate; it is an absolute cure. After a course of it an occasional dose at intervals will forever after prevent return.

Joe M. Cox, of 736 Turk Street, San Francisco, writes: "I have been troubled with attacks of sick-headache for the last three years from one to three times a week. Some time ago I bought two bottles of Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla and have only had one attack since and that was on the second day after I began using it."
