

TUESDAY'S PRESIDENTIAL POINTERS.

The election Tuesday did much to clear up the doubts which hung over presidential possibilities for '92. One man apparently buried without the hope of resurrection, is President Harrison. He lost New York by the defeat of the republican party in that state, and he lost Pennsylvania by the success of the same party and the decisive victory of Quay. New York was organized entirely in the interest of Harrison, and solely with reference to his renomination, and he lost, Pennsylvania was organized under Quay, with the Blaine banner floating over the party, and Quay won by an overwhelming majority against the most fearful odds he ever encountered.

There was no need for any fresh impetus to the Blaine movement, for the Plumed Knight has had the nomination clearly at his option ever since the November elections of 1890. The elections of Tuesday did not weaken him in any section, and greatly strengthened him in both New York and Pennsylvania. He will be the nominee of the party if he shall have vigor enough to accept the strain of a national contest, and it will be substantially unanimous. Until Tuesday last, it seemed settled that if Blaine should be unable to accept the candidacy, the nomination would go to Harrison without a contest. Things are different now, and the legate of Blaine's political estate is Governor McKinley, of Ohio. It is now next to certain that the republican candidate for president next year will be either James G. Blaine or William McKinley.

Tuesday's elections have cleared away what seemed to be a tangled thicket of underbrush in the presidential field on the democratic side. Had Pennsylvania and Ohio voted democratic, it would have created two presidential possibilities in Governor Campbell and Governor Pattison, and if the Farmers' Alliance had maintained its power in the west, it would have made the nomination of Cleveland impossible. As it is, the west will have no formidable candidate to hold the western states from republicanism, and the Farmers' Alliance has practically perished as a political factor.

On the other hand, the doubtful battle in New York was turned to a positive and sweeping democratic victory chiefly by the heroic efforts of Grover Cleveland. He made but one speech outside of his state, and that was in Massachusetts, where, for the first time in the history of that Commonwealth, the democrats have elected a governor two consecutive terms. So far as the democrats have won on Tuesday, they have won on a conservative financial policy, and there is now apparently but one hopeful candidate for the democratic nomination next year—Grover Cleveland. Such appear to be the presidential pointers of Tuesday's election. — Philadelphia Times.

Inspector H. P. Thrall, of San Francisco, has been examining the postoffice at South Bend, Ind. He finds a shortage of $2550. The defalcation is principally to the business incapacity of the postmaster, Samuel A. Rounds, who has shuffled the accounts of his store and the office till they are in inextricable confusion. The inspector has turned the office over to the bondsmen, Cooper, Eklund and Foster, who will also take possession of the small stock of merchandise, consisting of drugs, liquors and notions, somewhat incumbered. They have placed G. W. Olney temporarily in charge of the office. Now, if this had happened under Cleveland's administration what a howl of righteous indignation would have been heard all over the land from the columns of republican organs deploring the incapacity and dishonesty of democratic officials. But somehow its other ox now that has been yoked and these self-same journals are mute as the grave, seeming to look upon the South Bend affair as coming as a matter of course.

A dispatch from Hutchinson, Kansas says: Complete returns show the entire republican ticket in this county elected by pluralities ranging from 150 to 400, a republican gain over last year of over 1000. Martin, republican, for judge of the Ninth District will have 500 majority. Returns from every county in this congressional district (Jerry Simpson's) show republican majorities. In all but two, where the alliance elected county tickets by very close votes. The aggregate republican majorities in the district are over 20,000.

The Mountaineer is in a troubled state of mind about Tammany. Let the Mountaineer turn its optics upon that beautiful trio, Quay, Bardsley and Livesy in Pennsylvania where these men, one of whom is in the penitentiary, have been endorsed by a republican majority of over 50,000.

The United States supreme court has postponed until Nov. 30 the argument in the three cases involving the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff act, and also the cases in which the act which provides for the classification of worsteds is attacked, on the ground that the speaker had no right to count a quorum in passing this bill.

Of thirty-two members of the state senate in New York the republicans have seventeen, the democrats fourteen, and there is one independent republican. The democrats have six majority in the house. In Iowa the democrats have one majority in the senate and the republicans have six majority in the house. — Oregonian.

Baker City has a reform council. It began business by voting themselves $60 a piece for services rendered, just like a few other reformers.

The Journal of Salem compliments its contemporary in the following pointed manner: The cheeky, egotistical publisher of a certain assinine sheet in Oregon are so sure that whoever disagrees with them is wrong that they can only escape by ignoring a controversy which they themselves originated.

Here is some sun light. The Salem Building & Loan Association has just closed its second year. The value of each share, costing $24, so far, is $31.29, a fine showing. No association in Oregon has made a better showing, if as good a one, which is saying a good deal, as the Albany association has done a fine business. The bidding, though, in the Salem association has been the highest of any in Oregon.
