

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is one of the leading republican papers of the west. It has never wavered in its devotion to the success of its party. It has been taking into full consideration the causes that led to its party's defeat. The consideration it has given to the subject is a very sober one. The following are the conclusions:

"The republican party was beaten because it had taken a wrong position on some of the leading questions of national concern. It was wrong on the Federal election matter; it was emphatically and fatally wrong on the tariff. The passage of the McKinley law of 1890 was the greatest blunder ever committed by any party since the democratic crime of secession. It overwhelmingly defeated the party in the congressional election of that year, and it was the leading cause in the overthrow this year. Many republicans who were never in favor of the act believed after the setback of 1890 that the popular hostility to it would subside by the time the presidential election came around, and that the party might then retain its supremacy in the executive branch of the government and regain control of the legislative branch. The returns show how completely and conspicuously those hopes have been blasted.

"This thing called McKinleyism—this advancing of duties on articles which have been on the dutiable list for from a third of a century to a century—has been condemned finally and eternally by the people. This verdict has been rendered twice, and after an interval of two years between the judgments. The first verdict may have been hastily given, and without a sufficient examination of the evidence, but the second was recorded after reasonable deliberation, and it was more pronounced and emphatic than the first. If the republican party is to win any victories in the future it must drop McKinleyism immediately and permanently, and send all the men who cling to it to the rear. The party must, of course, adhere to the protective policy, but it must be protection of the rational kind—the protection which keeps the interests of consumers as well as those of producers in view."

A dispatch from Mobile, Alabama says:

"The national republican committee, through Chairman Thomas H. Carter, is sending out most urgent letters to the leaders of the party for money to pay the deficiency in the national campaign fund. One of these letters was to a southern member of the national committee. This letter was signed by Chairman Carter and stated that the national committee had a deficiency after the election of nearly $225,000. It is stated that at the eleventh hour republicans discovered that defeat was inevitable, and through the campaign committee, kept campaign expenses well within the limits of subscriptions thereto. It was found that subscribers who had pledged $500,000 to the party refused to fulfill their obligations and the result is that the deficit is nearly the amount stated, and thus with an empty treasury. The fact of this deficiency, Mr. Carter says, should not become public, as it will be by default by the committee and litigation. He states that after carefully considering whence to raise the amount the committee has made an assessment among good party men of an amount sufficient to pay the deficit. The assessment of the person who received the letter was fixed at $1000. He was asked to collect the money or forward it in five days by check or draft made payable to Duane, treasurer of the committee, at his address in New York. The committeeman said that Chairman Carter in sending the letter to him had gravely mistaken his man as Harrison had when he made Carter chairman of the republican committee.

Eighty-eight members-elect of the legislature of Texas have answered the query of the Post as to their choice for senator that they are unqualifiedly for Roger Q. Mills. This assures the re-election of Senator Mills with eight votes to spare. The Post received answers from 96 of the 159 members; of these yet to be heard from a majority, it is believed, support Mills.

At a meeting of spinners of the Blackstones Valleys District in Rhode Island, reports were received from a majority of the mills stating that an increase of 7 per cent in wages would be made December 5th. The increase at J & P Coates, limited, at Pawtucket, will be from 10 to 15 per cent in all departments.

The Welch Tin Plate Workers' Union is discussing measures to prevent black plates which are merely tinned in America from being palmed off on the American public as entirely of American manufacture, so as to enable the American who does the tinning to get the protection of a heavy duty.

The Illinois Steel Company proposes to shut down its steel-rail plant this winter because of "the uncertainties of tariff legislation." This is a protection falsehood. This company is in the steel-rail trust. This trust so completely controls the market that it fixes the price of rails without regard to the state of the market. All summer the price of steel rails has been held at $30 a ton, although there was very little demand for them. The price in England was $20. This mill is to be shut down because the other mills can make all the rails that are needed. By shutting down the expenses of operation can be reduced. If the tariff was reduced to $5 a ton from the present tax of $13.40, the difference between the cost of production here and abroad would be entirely covered. The cheapening of the price would also tend to increase the demand. The Illinois people know this and know that if the tariff is so reduced they will go on making rails, although they may no longer export their former abnormal profits.

The next two years will see great changes in Oregon politics.—Salem Journal. Right, you are. The changes are likely to be as great as those that have occurred in the nation since the passage of the McKinley bill. Let 'em come.

Official returns for Arkansas give Cleveland 38,383 majority.
