The Pendleton E O tells as follows how the tin horns were shipped from that city: Marshal McBrien is a kindly disposed officer, and dislikes to cause anyone personal inconvenience, but it appears is compelled to do so in the fulfillment of duty. Saturday night the new marshal and his deputies made the rounds and extended a polite but pressing invitation to five individuals to remove their presence from the city, which they promised to do. The reason given is that they have no visible means of support, and are of no value to the community. It is pretty hard to move out in the dead of winter, when brake beam and blind baggage traveling is uncomfortable, but the rounders will have to make a virtue of necessity and hunt in other fields for prey.
