MARKETS

THE O. P. will be extended to the Deschutes this year. Remember the fact.

A Salem man warrants every egg sold to be fresh. A bright idea.

This is how the Roseburg Review grunts at its Salem brethren: A state exchange is predicting a big price for pork this year because of the shortage of hogs in England and other countries. This ignorant editor forgets that Salem can supply the world and has forced competitors out of the business.

Ellensburg is solving the hobo question by heroic treatment. Three of that genus, who refused to leave when ordered to do so by the marshal, were whipped with willow switches until they were glad to leave. The same treatment will be administered to all subsequent visitors of the same ilk, for the citizens of that town are determined to harbor no tramps.]

A letter to an Albany man states that financial matters are at low ebb in California; that $10,000 could not be borrowed there with all of Oregon as security. Canneries and fruit orchards will lie idle for want of money with which to run them. Poor crops add to the bad outlook. Oregonians have much less to complain of.

A good illustration of the business quiet now prevailing is given at the county clerk's office. There hardly one instrument is filed now where three were filed at the same time last year, and receipts have decreased about one-half, and one regular deputy is employed while three were necessary in July of 1892. One thing to be thankful for is that but two lawsuits have been filed within the last six weeks.—Pendleton E. O.
