FREE COINAGE AND NATIONAL BANKS

In the solution of the finance question congress and the chief executive will find themselves between two elements whose interests are to a certain extent diametrical. One element is composed of the advocates of free silver coinage—made up principally of residents of silver producing states and individuals owning stock in silver mines,—and the other element made up of advocates of national banks, institutions which must soon produce a new lease of life by the extension or further issuance of bonds, or go out of business. The silver men claim that the problem can be solved by a free coinage law, while the national bank advocates say that it can best be solved by the estoppel of silver coinage and the issuance of bonds which shall serve as a basis for increased circulation of national bank paper. Both are wrong, and both solutions are based upon personal aggrandizement. The free coinage of silver would lead to wide-spread unrest and would cause foreign holders of American securities to surrender them and demand their payment in gold as is stipulated and specified in the contract. This demand could not be met and disastrous financial and business reverses would naturally follow. It is plain therefore that the panacea does not lie in the free coinage theory. As for the national banks any attempt to give them a new lease of life will call down the wrath of the people upon the party responsible for it. So, too, is the issuance of bonds in the interest of these concerns to be guarded against. If we are to increase the circulating medium by a paper issuance, reserving gold as a commodity to adjust international obligations, and that is the logical deduction, let that paper be issued by the government direct. The claim that when issued to and through institutions subordinate to the government currency is made more secure is the veriest bosh. What better security can be had than the government? What better does the borrower or lender, payee or payor ask or require? It would certainly appear that our additional currency must be paper, and when we reach that point let the government issue direct, base said issuance upon the faith, honor and integrity of the nation, make it a legal tender for all obligations whatsoever and we will have a dollar that will stay at home and render every service required of it. It is evident, however, that both these elements will exert every effort to influence legislation favorable to them, but with congress democratic and a chief executive fearless in the discharge of his duty the country at large can await action with the utmost contentment, satisfaction and confidence. The government is in safe hands.—Council Bluffs Globe.

PARTY, RIGHT OR WRONG.

Wool has not helped the northwest but little this year, and the millions of pounds stored and consigned have sent few dollars in circulation by reason of the shadow of free trade that has covered the market. The next hope of the people is that a fair crop of wheat with good prices, and the expectation that congress will not repeal the McKinley bill, will bridge the chasm of hard times. These will encourage the farmer and the sheepmen that there is "a good time coming."—Mountaineer.

The Mountaineer will find a reason for justifying and approving an act or policy of the republican party when all others fail to find such reason. It finds a reason to condemn the democratic party when all others fail to find such reason. Now carefully weigh the following facts in connection with the above statement and it will be seen that the Mountaineer has not an inch of ground to stand upon: Wool began to decline in price after the passage of the McKinley bill and at a time when, apparently, there was no reason to suppose that there was any danger that a "free trade" policy would be adopted by the government. Times are hard, money scarce. People buy less woolen goods than at any time during the last decade. People wear their woolen goods more threadbare and "patch" them much more than formerly. This lessening of purchases curtails the sales of retail dealers in woolsens, who in turn buy less from the wholesale dealers. Wholesale dealers buy less from manufacturers, and thus the latter have less demands for wool, and in accordance with an immutable law of trade (the demand for a commodity being lessened the price must decline) the price of wool has gone down. But the price of wheat, corn, cotton, cattle, horses etc have also gone down. Will the Mountaineer attempt to account for the decline in prices of these commodities by saying that the "shadows of free trade" cover the markets? Will it if it can find no better reason. But every pound of wool now being imported into this country pays McKinley duties and should bring McKinley prices. Under such circumstances why are we importing so much wool? Carefully look into the following and then talk of the shadows of "free trade": The amount imported for the month of May, 1892, was 14,164,924 pounds and for the month of May, 1893, it was 14,581,591 pounds, an increase of 416,667 pounds for one month alone. But look at this: For

The eleven months ending June 1st, 1892, the number of pounds imported was 138,762,989 pounds and for the eleven months ending June 1st of this year it amounted to 160,577,515 pounds, an increase of 21,814,526 pounds. These figures are official and cannot be disputed.

CLEVELAND'S BLUFF

The arrest of ex-Collector Lotan and his associates at Portland for alleged violations of the Geary law is decidedly a political bluff. Coming from an administration that has in every way failed to give the people the benefit of that law, it is the height of insolence to use it for political purposes to prosecute Republicans. If the administration had shown zeal in enforcing the Geary law in place of seeking in every way to frustrate and nullify it, to the extent of advising with the chief justice of the supreme court in securing a suspension of the act—it could consistently apply the law rigidly to Lotan and others. But when Cleveland and his cabinet are the chief malefactors in encouraging Chinese immigration in violation of law, and absolutely refuse to enforce the law, what position are they in to prosecute officials for technical malfeasances. It is clearly a monumental bluff for partisan purposes.—Capital Journal.

We are loath to spoil this little growl game of the Journal, but duty compels us to do so. Lotan is not charged with a violation of the Geary law but another act of congress. He is also charged with conspiracy to smuggle opium. It is charged that this move is persecution rather than prosecution. If so it should be frowned down by every body.

A memorandum kept by George Washington during the campaign in 1757, which contains the names of the men composing the companies enlisted for the service of the different colonies of Virginia, is owned by Lawrence Washington of Alexandria, Va., the General's great grandnephew.

In 1851 there were in the United States but a few thousand miles of railroad and telegraph line. There are now 170,000 miles of the former and more than that mileage of the latter.

UNDERTAKING A SPECIALTY

HYDE & JAMES, Proprietors

Mrs. Dr. Patterson-Wallace. The Noted Clairvoyant and Life Reader, is now here, and can be found at her residence, next door to J. B. Condit's. She tells about all subjects, past, present and future; love troubles, absent friends and business. You can hear from your dead friends.

"How do I look?" That depends, madam, upon how you feel. If you're suffering from functional disturbances, irregularities or weaknesses, you're sure to "look it." And Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the remedy. It builds up and invigorates the system, regulates and promotes the proper functions, and restores health and strength. It's a legitimate medicine, not a beverage; purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and made especially for woman's needs. In the cure of all "female complaints," it's guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money is refunded. No other medicine for women is sold so. Think of that, when the dealer says something else (which pays him better) is "just as good."

"Times have changed." So have methods. The modern improvements in pills are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They help Nature, instead of fighting with her. Sick and nervous headache, biliousness, costiveness, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.
