CITY OFFICIAL PAPER.

UNCAID AS USUAL.

A few years ago the democratic war cry took the form of demand for the reduction of the treasury surplus. Now, in the opinion of a cabinet officer of a democratic administration, what the country needs is to "keep the surplus in the treasury. Instead of using it." What about the injustice to farmers and laboring men in keeping such vast sums out of everyday circulation, of which erstwhile we heard so much? What about the dividends your political bedfellows a few years ago declared to be due to every man in the country from this same treasury hoard? All things considered, the administration of public affairs that permitted the accumulation of a governmental rainy-day fund seems not to have been so wide of the mark of national prosperity as our democratic friends and their close allies, the populists, succeeded in making a majority of the voters in the country believe.—Oregonian.

The cloven foot of the Oregonian comes to the front as usual. The democratic war cry a few years ago was for a reduction of taxation so that so large a surplus revenue might not be hoarded up in the treasury vaults at Washington, instead of in the pockets of the people where it rightly belonged. It was in this way that the democrats expected to reduce the surplus, and not by "using it" as the Oregonian intimates. The great surplus which accumulated during Mr Cleveland's first administration was left to Harrison's administration "to use," and how successfully that was accomplished, was well attested by the bankrupt treasury turned over to the Cleveland administration, March 4th, last. When we take a retrospect of the administrations since 1872, we find Grant's was notoriously corrupt from top to bottom. Hayes by force of circumstances and public opinion lopped off much of the extravagance and corruption that held high carnival during Grant's last term. Arthur by natural desire sought to make a clean administration but he was heavily handicapped by the remnants of the Grant crowd that were still holding on to the sinking ship. Cleveland lopped these comorants off and at the end of his term there was nearly one hundred million dollars surplus money in the treasury not needed. During his term Mr Cleveland urged upon congress to pass laws, not to use this surplus, but to reduce the taxation by which the surplus was accumulated. But the senate was republican and the only way that body would consent to reduce the surplus was by making extravagant appropriations. Mr Cleveland was opposed to such dangerous policy. The result was that at the end of Cleveland's term a large surplus was left in the treasury which quickly vanished under the "using" process of a Kael congress supported by Harrison. The Oregonian says that the "administration of public affairs that permitted the accumulation of a governmental rainy-day fund seems not to have been so wide of the mark, etc."

Indeed! It was a democratic administration only that permitted the accumulation of a rainy-day fund, and Harrison's term must have been a rainy day one as the money was all squandered during his term. The less the Oregonian has to say on this subject the better it will be for its party. That paper may fool all the people some times, and part of the people all the time, but it will find it a futile task to fool all the people all the time.

Every now and then some republican official proves a defaulter and a certain class of democratic papers set up the cry about corrupt republican officials and actually treat of the matter as though only republican officials proved defaulters. Such a course is discreditable. There is no reason or excuse for it. Democrats prove defaulters just the same as republicans, and so will populists if they should ever succeed to power. Men are not necessarily more honest because they are democrats or populists nor more dishonest because they are republicans. Party men in the United States should be more charitable towards each other.

"We are the only civilized country that does not tax wealth," says Congressman Breckinridge. If the other Congressmen can be made to perceive this our millionsaires will no longer be denied the privilege, dear to all true patriots, of contributing their share to support the Government. It is a fact that they have never sent a lobby to Washington to insist upon the right to help pay, but they must have noticed how they have been slighted ever since the first national debt was contracted.

Governor Penoyer is fixing up a slate for the populist state convention, which places Judge Rolse at the head of the ticket for governor. Penoyer is very smooth. To remove the obstructions out of his way to the senate, he thinks it would be a great point to elect Reuben governor of Oregon. Nothing selfish about Sylvester.—Farmers Journal.

Obegod Parson Henry, a life-long republican, has applied to President Cleveland for collector of customs for Astoria. He will get it where the chicken got the ax.—Astoria Herald.

Over 1000 steamships are traversing the four great ocean routes.

The Oregonian says President Cleveland will have to look to republican votes in congress to repeal the Sherman law, and thinks this an anomalous condition of things. Not so. Republican leaders and newspaper organs are almost a unit in declaring the law a very pernicious one, and one whose effects are evil, and that continually, and that it should be repealed. Is it not entirely natural that the president should look to those to right the wrong who inflicted the wrong upon the country and especially when they see and admit the wrong themselves? A republican house passed the Sherman law without a single democratic vote in its favor. So likewise in the senate. A republican president approved the law. Then why not naturally expect that these republicans would be swift to make some atonement for the great wrong inflicted upon the country. If its effects are as evil as the Oregonian and Sherman say the law is, Senator Sherman should at the very first opportunity arise in his place and introduce a bill for its repeal. This would be natural and honest and not anomalous.

The Republican organs attribute the low price of wheat to the Democratic administration. By the way, did the Republican administration, when it increased the duty on wheat, intend that this particular tariff should raise or lower prices? Sometimes the Republicans tell us that the McKinley bill was passed to increase prices, and sometimes they tell us it was passed to decrease them. Now, what has such a comprehensive tariff as this done to wheat?—Jacksonville Times.

There is reason to believe that Albany will have another bank—either a new one or a resuscitation of the Linn County bank.

The wrong way, with Catarrh, is to stop it without curing it. The poisonous, irritating snuffs, strong caustic solutions, "creams," balms and the like may, perhaps, palliate for a time. But they may drive the disease to the lungs. The wrong way is full of danger.

The right way is a proved one. It's with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cures, perfectly and permanently, by its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh. It has proved itself right, thousands of times, when everything else has failed.

And this makes its proprietors willing to prove that it's the right thing for you, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing. If they can't cure your Catarrh, they'll pay you $500 in cash. They mean it. They're certain of their medicine.
