Private cars are in such frequent use by merican millionairs and railway presidents that it is difficult how to appreciate the sensation created when Jenny Lind, just after her matrisge, had a passenger car of the style then in vogue fitted up as a drawing-room coach for herself. The famous singer had a cottage at Pittsfield, Mass, but, resenting the endeavor of curious eyes to pry into the privacy of her honeymood, the hired a car, had the reats removed and fitted it up with her own laxurious household furgiture. This was one of the first instances in the history of American rai'reading of a car being put at the adsolute disposal of one passeng er, but the practice great in favor from this example and hastened the development of the luxarions d awing room car of to day.
