

A VERY CLEAR SWEEP.

The result in New York is the overthrow of the bosses and the breakdown of the machine.

The route is complete. Not only is Judge Maynard defeated by an overwhelming majority, but he drags down the whole ticket with him.

It was an act that furnished a fitting climax to the sort of machine politics and boss rule which found expression in the snap convention of February, 1895.

This is the first opportunity that has come to the voters to deal with this misleading of the party—the domination of the bosses. The verdict is significant.

The year was propitious for the needed discipline. The state offices lost are relatively unimportant. A republican legislature will be checked by a democratic governor.

The democratic tariff bill will probably be published much earlier than has been anticipated. The resolute tariff reformers have been warned by the attitude of the moderate tariff men in the party since election.
