

From our regular Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 13, 1893.

Secretary Gresham's official report to the president showing that great injustice was done to the native Hawaiian government by the action of the U S minister to that government under the last administration, in practically compelling the queen by a display of marines from the U S S Boston to abdicate in favor of the provisional government which was formed, it is believed largely if not entirely by the advice and connivance of that minister, for the purpose of carrying out the scheme of the annexation of Hawaii, which played such a conspicuous part during the closing days of the Harrison administration, has for a time relegated the financial and tariff questions to back seats, and everybody is discussing the Hawaiian matter.

The report concludes with the recommendation, which was approved by the president and the other members of the cabinet, that the wrong should be righted as far as lay in the power of this government by restoring the native government of Hawaii to the position it occupied before the queen was forced by a U S minister, not by the provisional government, to abdicate. This was a bold and fearless step for the president to take, but believing it to be right he took it and issued the necessary orders to Minister Willis, who harrasing accidents arrived at Honolulu more than a week ago, to carry it into effect, although he knew full well that it would at first be unpopular, particularly with those who would only look at the surface of the question and regard it merely as the use of the power of the power of the United States to overthrow a deposed monarchy. But those who know the president were not surprised that he should prefer being right to being popular; he has been doing that sort of thing ever since he has been in public life.

There are not many democratic senators and representatives in Washington, but some of those here who were at first disposed to criticize the action of the president have already changed their minds, and it is believed that when the next news arrives from Hawaii they will all be disposed to acknowledge that the administration took the only right and proper course. If, as the administration believes, the provisional government only existed because the native Hawaiians believed it to have been created and supported by the power of the United States, it would at once cease to exist as soon as Minister Willis officially announced the contrary, as he doubtless did as soon as he arrived at Honolulu. If the queen should then be unable to maintain herself in power that will be her own affair, as neither she nor those who might attempt to overthrow her government would receive aid from the United States. In other words, the action of the United States is merely intended to allow the Hawaiians to govern themselves in any way they may see fit without any outside interference, and as the first step toward that end it was necessary that things should be restored to the same condition in which they were when Minister Stevens interfered to overthrow the old government. The question of monarchy or republic had nothing to do with it, nor was sentiment allowed to intrude. It was only a question of right and wrong, and the administration, acting upon the information gathered by Mr Blount during his long stay and investigation in Hawaii, has only done what it believes to be right, and what it believes the American people, regardless of politics, will in the end endorse. The power of the United States is too great to be exercised to the detriment of its weaker neighbors, and the sense of fair play is prevalent in the United States for the people to wish a wrong perpetrated because it was done by a United States official.

The annual report of the First Assistant Postmaster General Jones recommends that the experimental free delivery in small towns and villages be discontinued at the end of the current year, the annual outlay of $10,000,000 not being justified by the results of the experiment, which he regards as a failure. Another great republican scheme—the ocean mail subsidy—is also reported to be a flat failure, and congress will probably be asked to repeal the law authorizing it.

President Cleveland is devoting nearly all his time to writing his annual message to congress, and in order to work without interruption he will only come to the White House on cabinet days until it is completed. There will be some surprises in the message for those who think that the results of the recent state elections will have any effect upon the president's policy.

WANT THEIR MONEY.

Jacob Huber, school director of the Jordan district, was in town Tuesday. He reports the people of Jordan and vicinity are considerably exercised over the fact that the school money that has been collected from the people and which ought to be now available for the payment of district warrants. From Mr Huber's conversation we judge that an effort will be made to compel Treasurer Wallace to account for school funds that ought now to be in his hands subject to the payment of school warrants. They think, and rightly too, that the county treasurer gave bonds that should be required to make good any deficit of that officer. If not, what is the object or use of requiring him to give bonds at all.—Sole Press.

The facts about this matter are already known to most people. At the time of the suspension of the Linn county bank county treasurer Wallace had something over $30,000 deposited there for safe keeping. The county does not furnish the treasurer with a safe place for keeping public funds, hence the deposit in the bank. This is just what all county treasurers have done for years. The money is tied up in the bank and can not be made available until a dividend of the amount collected by the receiver is ordered by the comptroller of the United States treasury. It is said on the streets that $70,000 have been collected and that a dividend will be ordered soon. It is unfortunate of course that our schools should be thus hampered but the blame can not certainly be placed upon the county treasurer nor upon the county school superintendent as some have attempted to do. The county school superintendent can apportion only the amount reported to him by the treasurer and this he has done. It is unfortunate for the schools but the misfortune comes to business of all kinds caused by the panic in financial matters.

Hood's Cures

Sharp Pains

Short Breath, Heart Trouble, Rheumatism.

Mrs. L. M. Payne
Eagle Creek, Oregon.

"I have lived here in Oregon for the past twenty years, and most of the time have been a very great sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism. I have also had what the doctor called heart disease, with shortness of breath and sharp pains in the left side. I decided to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had finished three bottles I was in better health than I had been for years. I do not have any pain now, sleep well, and to-day no woman of my age

Enjoys Better Health than I. At home on the ranch I not only attend to my family household, but last summer I cared for and milked four cows. I do not feel that I can say half enough in praise of
