

WILL THEY?

In a few days a meeting of wool growers will be held in Salem to protest against the passage of the free wool feature of the Wilson bill.

It is to be made at a peculiarly fitting time. These wool growers, with an average production of nearly 50 per cent on their products, as shown by the imports, and far more than that through prohibitory rates, meet in midwinter, amid a people shivering for lack of comfortable clothing, to protest against the passage of a bill that will enable these same shivering people to purchase necessary clothing cheaper than now.

The English landlords who tried to put up the price of corn during the Irish famine were their historic prototypes.

Instead of meeting in a hotel parlor over their canvasses and wine to discuss ways and means of diverting congress from its duty, let these wool growers call a public meeting at the opera house in Salem or Portland of the men who have but one coat, or half a coat, and the women with one poor shawl. There are enough of them to fill several halls. Let their orators present to this audience the enormous offense of the democratic committee in proposing to make wool free, and to reduce in consequence the duty on imported wools from 100 to 40 or 45 per cent!

If their "protest" does not evolve a boomerang of cyclonic force it will be because the victims of McKinleyism in these towns have been numbed into a stupor by their want of "protection."

PROVES TOO MUCH.

Grosvonts of Ohio, a blind follower of the cause of protectionism made a ridiculous spectacle of himself in the house Saturday when debating the Wilson bill. He called attention to a suit of clothes which he wore and for which he said he paid $10.80. He then exhibited a suit which he said he purchased in England and for which he paid $16.50. This suit he declared was inferior in quality to the American suit no worse. This argument was made for the ear of the consumer. It was intended to prove that the McKinley tariff of 75 per cent on this suit bought in England had no effect on the price of the American suit, but like all tariff arguments this proves too much. Let us look into this matter of buying a suit in England for $16.50 and importing it into this country. When Mr. Grosvonts arrived at New York with that suit of clothes, the first thing he had to do was to present himself to the collector of customs. This officer took the suit of clothes and weighed them. Weight six pounds. Collector informs Mr. G that on the weight of these goods there is a duty of 49 1/2 cents per pound. Mr. G reluctantly handed out $2.07 for the privilege of bringing this suit into his own country. The collector smiled blandly and at the same time told Mr. G that in addition to this tax duty of $2.07 on the weight of the goods there was an ad valorem duty of 60 per cent on the cost. Now 60 per cent of $16.50

As any school teacher will tell, you are $9.90 This added to the $2.07 makes $12.87 as the tax Mr. G had to pay for the privilege of bringing this suit into his own country. If we add this tax of $12.87 to the cost of the suit in England, $16.50, we find this suit cost Mr. G $29.37 in New York. Now if we can buy an American suit of clothes for $10.80 that is as good or superior in quality to an English suit that costs in New York $29.37, what is the need of protection upon ready made clothing? Taking the case as made by this great apostle of protection, our American manufacturer can easily compete and even outsell the English manufacturer. Then how silly is the cry set up by the eastern manufacturers that the passage of the Wilson bill would ruin their business. The duty on this suit under the present law is 75 per cent and under the Wilson bill it is 45 per cent which is entirely too much. But the Democrat would rather see the duty placed at 45 per cent than permitted to remain at 75 per cent, hence it urges the passage of Wilson's bill.

The Herald comes out in strong terms against the proposition to enact an income tax law. This is the republican policy. Under the scheme of protectionism the poor are made to pay as much or more taxes than the rich, while under the Income tax law men are taxed according to their wealth and their ability to pay. The policy of the republican party is to shield protected monopolies from the burdens of taxation and those barons are thrown on the common herd. How long will the mass remain blinded by partisan prejudices? This opposition to the income tax is purely partisan and selfish. Republicans feel if they can defeat it, this will enable them to have more and higher tariff duties. At the same time they know they would thus place the protected barons and millionaires under obligations to them and that the party would thus secure their aid in carrying elections.
