OUTING NO. 8.

When a man is at a summer resort, he needs some kind of amusement. Sometimes it is difficult to find the kind in which he takes much interest. But strange as it may seem, Caelebs seldom fails to find enjoyment in watching the effects of Cupid's random shooting. Perhaps it is wicked in him to be amused when he sees that two have been wounded by the reckless shooting of the naughty little shooter. How wicked such amusement is he will allow the reader to judge from a few specimens.

A few weeks ago, a young man and his girl from Corvallis drove up to the hotel about noon on Sunday. It did not require much gumption to see that both had been bit by Cupid's arrows and were still suffering from the effects of the wounds. In helping his girl out of the buggy, the young man was evidently very much afraid the dear creature would make some slip and be badly hurt. To prevent any direful calamity, he took the precious treasure in his arms and landed her safely on the sidewalk. When they went to the Mineral Spring to quench their thirst after a long ride, they walked in close proximity, and the young man seemed to have great difficulty in keeping his arm from getting out of place in broad day-light in front of the hotel. Once in the afternoon they happened to be the only occupants of the sitting room. A side glance through the door revealed the fact that they were not sitting at opposite sides of the room. Was it wicked in Caelebs to be amused?

For three successive weeks, in Camp Dewey, there was an attraction, whose influence was felt twenty miles away and was so great that it never failed to draw a young man of Albany to the center of attraction every Sunday. Well, there is nothing very amazing in that, perhaps some one says. I admit it. But just wait a little while. You have heard all. There was a marked difference between the attracting body and the attracted one, in one respect. One was "long for the world" and the other was not. The difference, in connection with the concomitant circumstances, which have to be seen to be appreciated, furnished amusement to Caelebs and called forth from him the remark, that he had long ago decided that he would never marry a woman to whom he would have to look up, when he was walking by her side. Six feet and three inches would be too much of a good thing and would deprive him of the pleasure of ever addressing her as his "dear little wife." Do you see why Caelebs was amused?

There is attraction here for another Albany young man; but he has been shy enough to deprive Caelebs of any amusement except in his shyness. He does not bring his girl to the hotel for dinner but dines with her, thus giving the boarders no opportunity of seeing how badly he is smitten. My private opinion is, that the wound is a serious one, but he does not make much ado about it. I think his case is similar to that of another young man in Albany, who, not many weeks ago, visited Sodaville in company with his girl. Neither of them is the "sick kitten" kind of lover, who furnishes amusement to some observers and disgusts others. But both act more like men who had been married several months.

Soon after my arrival in Sodaville, I made the discovery, that Cupid during the past year, either by reckless or intentional shooting had wounded two of the town. A careful diagnosis of the case leads me to the belief, that the wounds are likely to prove fatal. I have been unable to observe any improvement in the last six weeks. In fact, I believe the symptoms are more alarming than they were when the diagnosis was made. I am very much inclined to believe that nothing will cure them but a dose of matrimony.

If time and space permitted, I might tell of three young men of Albany with their best girls who visited Sodaville last Sunday; but I will not, I will merely say that the young men were very devoted and the girls were highly pleased with their devotion. At any rate that was the impression made on CAELEBS.

From the Topeka Capital:
At any rate, the people over in Spain are not divided in opinion as to which particular commander should receive credit for any particular victory.

In dealing with Spain we have learned much, and best of all we have learned that procrastination and subterfuge are never highest diplomatic cards. The game of peacemaking should be so played that these cards will be of little value to our wary antagonist.—Kansas City Journal.

Had Barbara Frietchie spoken to a Spanish soldier instead of to a confederate in the famous speech that has been immortalized in school declamations, the lines would have been:

But shoot as you usually do," she said.

The ambitious teacher is now attending the summer school and laying in a store of facts for next term time; while the domestic teacher is helping her mother about the cooking or lending a hand in taking care of her married sister's babies, and it's ten to one that she, too, will come back to the school-room with a lot of new ideas, and ideas gained in practical school of experience.
