TO FORBID COTTON CROP.

Movement Started to Suspend Planting in the South.

Washington.—A movement which, if it is successful, will mean that no cotton will be planted in the nine great cotton growing states of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma in 1915 will take definite shape in the states referred to. The plan is for the states to pass laws that will prohibit the planting of cotton and substitute oats, corn and other grains.

The two states that are expected to lead the movement are Texas, the largest cotton growing state of the south, and South Carolina, the leading cotton goods manufacturing state south of the Potomac. The "no crop in 1915" movement is the result of the deliberations of the Southern Cotton association. The resolution offered by Governor Noel and adopted by the association points out that if no cotton is planted in 1915 it will not impose undue burdens on the cotton growers or consumers and that the drastic action advocated in addition to eradicating the boll weevil and other pests will as a result of the planting of other crops reduce the cost of living and bring to the farmers of the south the benefits of crop diversification.

TRADE LOOKS UP IN WEST.

Chicago Packing Houses Forced to Run Night and Day.

Chicago.—Merchants, manufacturers, packers and men in many other lines of trade report a significant upturn in business conditions in and around this city and in the middle west generally. Some of the improvement is attributed to conditions arising from the war, but a much larger proportion is attributed to increasing American prosperity—a more insistent demand among Americans for agriculture products.

At no time in the history of the Chicago stock yards has business been so brisk. In fact, all the big packing establishments have orders enough to keep them working night and day until Jan. 1. While the war is a contributing factor, it by no means accounts for the general activity in all lines of manufacturing.

PANAMA CANAL TRADE EXCEEDS ESTIMATES

War Checks Business, but Expectations Are Realized.

Washington.—Despite the general check on business in consequence of the European war and the interference of war vessels with the shipping of belligerent nations, traffic through the Panama canal in the first month and a half of its commercial service exceeded the expectations of Colonel Goethals. Up to Oct. 7 100 vessels had passed through, and the traffic is increasing. A picturesque fleet which passed through recently was composed of four Norwegian steam whaling vessels which had been in Magdalena bay, West Mexico. The season of eight months had netted 20,000 barrels of oil, worth $300,000. By using the canal the fleet expected to reach Norway four months sooner than if it had gone around South America and to have between $25,000 and $30,000 in expenses of travel after paying $4,012 canal tolls. The canal government has established mail and cable service for the officers and crews of vessels. Letters and cable messages addressed to Cristobal or Balboa, Canal Zone, will be delivered to passing ships. By using a wall map and push pins representing ships the port captain can tell where a vessel in the canal should be at any moment.
