CITIES PROTEST TODAY ON RESERVE BANK LOCATIONS

Rival Claims of Richmond, Va., and Baltimore, Md., for financial and commercial supremacy were aired here today. Hearings were begun by the federal reserve board upon the protest of Baltimore against the location of the regional reserve bank at Richmond instead of Baltimore. Failing to win out in the fight with Richmond to have the regional bank located at Baltimore, interests of the latter city request, as one alternative, that Baltimore be included in the Philadelphia instead of the Richmond banking district.

Other protests of geographical divisions of the new banking system were heard by the board later. The regional banks were assigned by the "organization committee" before the board was appointed. The board has authority to re-district and change the banking districts at any time. As Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and Comptroller of the Currency John Skelton Williams were members of the board, it is thought that important changes in the present geographical make-up of the new system are doubtful.

Prominent bankers and business men of both Baltimore and Richmond appeared today. They filed reams of documents pro and con. The oral arguments today, however, were the first held by the new board.
