GARLAND WOULD SIMPLIFY EDUCATIONAL PLAN

Linn County Senator Has Decided Ideas Upon Question and Will Present Bill.

The following is reprinted from the Salem Statesman:

Simplification of the present educational system is being strongly advocated by Senator Garland of Linn county, a member of the senate committee on education. Senator Garland believes that the plan now pursued in the public schools of the state is far too complex and he proposes to work for changes that will be more suitable both to the teachers and pupils.

Informal discussion of methods which will result in simplifying the system of educational training now in vogue in Oregon have been held by members of the education committees from both houses, but as yet no definite plan of procedure has been decided upon.

"As conditions now exist," said Senator Garland, "the teachers cannot teach nor can the pupils learn all that the prescribed course of study demands. The methods of instruction are wrong in many respects, and the course of study mapped out for the different semesters, in a great many cases covers too wide a range. The instructor is unable to teach the subject properly in consequence, and the pupil cannot grasp the mass of facts expected of him or her. Some means to remedy this apparent defect, I believe can be worked out. Both the senate and house committees are already consulting with education heads throughout the state and I am sure every member welcomes ideas which may be of service."

The senate education committee has considered Dimick's bill which will do away with county education boards and supervisors, and the majority seem to oppose it as it now stands. A substitution bill probably will be introduced. This substitute measure will give each county the option of whether it shall continue the present supervisory system or cut it out. Some members of the committee believe that by cutting out supervisors and returning to the old system, the state would save at least $10,000 in salaries.

Educators, however, are urging the committee to retain the law. They argue that with no supervisors to assist the county superintendent, he would be unable to cover the entire county properly, and educational progress would suffer. So far Senator Garland says the substitute measure which allows counties to retain the supervisory system or not as they see fit, obtains the preference.

Senator Garland expects to introduce a bill reducing the number of holidays now granted school in Oregon. He believes that there are too many days now set aside for teachers' institutes. He thinks the institute law should be amended changing the days of holding the institutes from Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, to Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This would do away with one useless holiday.
