SPORTSMEN OPPOSE POLITICS IN GAME COMMISSION

Editor of Democrat:—There is a strong movement by members of the legislature to abolish the game protection fund by taking the license money paid in by hunters and anglers and put it into the general fund; also of doing away with the present commission form of administration and throw the whole matter into politics by having the governor appoint the fish and game wardens.

Both of these measures were radically opposed by the combined sportsmen's organizations all over the state at the annual convention held last December.

If you want more birds in the field and more fish in the streams, we ask you to write a personal letter of protest immediately to your representatives and senators in the legislature asking that they vote against these proposed changes. Do it now.

Fishing and hunting in this state are attracting people from every part of the country. Maine values her fish and game resources at $20,000,000 a year, California at $10,000,000 a year. Neither of these states have a better opportunity than Oregon to become a sportsman's paradise. The Deschutes, the Rogue, the McKenzie and other streams are known throughout the United States from the anglers' standpoint. Hunting in eastern and southern Oregon are also renowned.

The outside sportsmen are people who have money to spend and money to invest. They buy equipment and stores; they spend money at hotels and for transportation and they constitute the state's most profitable class of tourist travel. And for our people, there is no better form of recreation, physically, mentally and morally.

H. B. VAN DUZER, President Ore. Sportsmen's League.

LATEST HINTS OF FASHIONS BY MARGARET MASON

By Margaret Mason. (Written for the United Press) Behold! The banished petticoat has now returned to grace. And ornament fair nether limbs With crepe de chine and lace. Quite like the prodigal's return The petticoats will be. Because the fatted calves are all Prepared for it you see.

New York, Jan. 22.—Whether an underskirt cast out by Fashion becomes an outcast or an outskirts is beside the question. The real point in the lingerie forecast for 1915 is that that particular article of wearing apparel, more noticeable by its absence than anything else the last season or two, has now returned in all the fullness of its pristine glory and also all the fullness of a circular cut. Naturally with the full flaring and pleated outside skirt of the mode the underskirt can no longer be denied. Hence the circular petticoat of 1915 now makes its bow before fair femininity. Snug and tight fitting about the hips it breaks into frothy ripples of lace around its circular finish, cascades of chiffon flounces, shimmering pleated silk and satin ruffles coquettish lovers knots of ribbon, garlands, wreaths and nosegays of tiny ribbon flowers add to its charm in circles for a circular petticoat.

Aping the fashion of the sleeveless evening gown a night-gown for a little later in the evening wear comes absolutely guileless of a sleeve. It is an Empire model of flesh colored crepe de chine and straps of the same material edged with ruffle of point de spirit hold it over the shoulders.

As a direct intimation of sleeveless nightie is the new model with the long tight sleeves and prim close round neck like the sensible and modest night habiliments of our granny's youth. Where theirs were virtuously composed of cotton flannel or heavy cast iron linen and cambric, however these latter day confections are evolved from sheerest tissue batiste and nainsook which prove that being under cover doesn't necessarily mean being out of sight.

The tailored nightgowns of crepe de chine are very popular owing to their easy laundry characteristics as well as their chaste beauty. They are usually cut on Empire lines and are finished solely with a row of hemstitching around the low neck and short sleeves.

While we haven't taken to moyen age nighties as yet this long waisted effect is being shown with killing effect on some of the newest combinations. In fact the moyen age combination is absolutely indispensable to the successful set of the moyen age frock. Under the gowns with the new old Empire waistline of course combination with the same short waistline are shown.

Envelope chemise still strive for general favor but after the first faddy novelty of them has worn off they are found neither as comfortable nor as attractive as they promised. Hence envelope chemise will envelope but few feminine figures this Spring.

When it comes to a question of corsets it's going to take the ladies, Heaven bless 'em, some time to get on to their curves to say nothing of getting into them. In some ways its going to be easier for the proverbial camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for some of us girls to get into a 1915 model Irene papillon Goodwin these curvful days.
