HELPING MEN UP.

Even if a man sent to the penitentiary does deserve to be punished, he also deserves to be reformed. He is a human being, and however much he has fallen, he has not fallen so low that he is not entitled to be helped up, at least given a chance to regain his manhood. The imprisonment itself, the taking away of a man's liberty is enough punishment. As bad as that is the standing he gets from being a convict. Hence every movement made to help him to be a better man deserves encouragement. The following from the Eugene Register is to the point, worthy of consideration. The movement to have the privilege of correspondence education extended to the prisoners confined in the Oregon penitentiary is one that ought to enlist the sympathy of all sensible and public spirited citizens, for it is one that is based not only upon human justice but upon a broad conception of the public welfare as well. It ought to succeed.

It is too bad that penitentiaries have to exist at all. It is too bad that there are men who will break the law. It is a tragic pity that men have to be shut up in penal institutions and denied the liberty that ought to be the birthright of every human being born into this world. Freedom and light and sunshine and the right to go anywhere we want to go and to mingle with the people with whom we want to mingle are the greater part of the things that make life worth while.

But until the millennium is much nearer here than it is yet and until human nature is a great deal more perfect than it is now, it will probably be necessary to have penitentiaries and to shut people up in them. Crime cannot be permitted to go unpunished, and deprivation of liberty is a form of punishment that probably cannot be abandoned without undesirable results.

But it is not necessary that the influence of penitentiaries shall be such as to brutalize those who are sent there because of crimes that are committed. It is not necessary to forget that those who are confined within penitentiary walls are still human beings, and that the state will have an active interest in their attitude toward society after they are released.

If there are any criminals in the Oregon penitentiary who are willing to take the correspondence courses offered by the University of Oregon, they ought to be allowed to do it. Education is a mighty factor in moral uplift, and the penitentiary inmate who is willing to devote long hours to study could certainly be expected to come out of prison better than he was when he entered.

Punishment should not be the only purpose for which prisons are maintained—although it is an important purpose and one that must be retained. But the fact must not be lost sight of that prisons can be made institutions of correction as well as punishment, and there certainly could be no better way to correct human faults than by providing facilities for acquiring education. The University of Oregon, which is maintained by the state, ought to be permitted to shed its light even into the darkest corners within the state's boundaries.

MISFITS

That's an exceedingly interesting mess back at Syracuse.

Really, when do you think the war will end?

Someone can take a great burden off Misfits and others by answering this correctly.

Miss. has gotten as far as county option. That's the way Or. started.

Being too serious is a serious matter.

The editor always likes to see his paper well added up.

The war so far looks like a stand off, and, why wouldn't that be a good way for it to end, calling things off, shaking hands, getting back into each other's families and hearts, throwing their pistols and other war trunks into the ocean, and swearing never to carry any more chips around.

Sales day or market day, it is a bit better.

Frankly, if they hang Frank, they will hang an innocent man, or Misfit doesn't know how to weigh evidence.

The time to hustle is when it's dull, and then some when it gets more lively.

A man back in Wichita has the daring to have a society page without the usual fulsome flattery about the charming Mrs. Jones and dainty lunches, and dressed to kill, etc. Why shouldn't just straight facts be sufficient without palaver, or should it?

Mallory Hats
Cravenette Weatherproof.

Time for a new hat! But it must be more than just new. You're looking for quality and workmanship, too, a hat that will stay smart. Guess you are looking for a Mallory! You'll be pleased with how fine it looks, how good it feels, how well it wears.

And — oh, come in and try one on!

Now in Portland—

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Kuns, after residing in Seattle several months, have come back to Portland, where they are now. Mr. Kuns bought a printing plant in Seattle, which he sold, and is now looking for another business opening. They are former Albany people, Mr. Kuns having been with both Churchill and Rawlings, and Mrs. Kuns was formerly with the Hamilton store.

Returned from Portland—

Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Churchill last night returned from their trip to Portland, motoring home in between four and five hours. Mrs. Churchill attended the grand lodge of L. O. T. M. and Degree of Honor, returning before the latter had adjourned, on account of a rush of business at the Churchill print shop.

The Gov's Cleanup Week—

Governor Withycombe has declared May 4-11 to be cleanup and paintup week in Oregon, and requests the people of the state generally to observe it. Albany people have already observed it, but will continue to remember the request to clean up and paint up, keeping it up during the entire season.

week. In the 150 bird shoot there were forty-six entries. The highest record was 146, made by F. M. Fisch and P. H. O'Brien. The Albany men scored as follows: Dr. Leininger, 137; W. G. Ballack, 132; P. J. Baltimore, 131; H. B. Cusick, 98. These were all in the amateur class.

Returns from Cascadia—

Carlton Ross of Albany, his aunt, Miss Jones and Miss Dorsey, arrived home yesterday after a week's vacation at Cascadia. They report having caught quite a number of fish, and had a good time. They footed it from Lebanon to Cascadia in about 13 hours.

Oregon Power Men Here—

An interesting gathering of Oregon Power managers was held yesterday in this city, with talks about the business and a fine banquet at the Hotel Albany. Those here were A. N. Norman, F. C. Burke and A. P. Tills, of Eugene; A. L. Martin, Dal las; Dale Mummy, Springfield; R. C. Hildreth, Junction; R. N. Steelquist, Corvallis; Ralph James, Brownsville, besides J. L. White, the popular Albany manager.

Today's Oddest Story.

Lawrence, Kan., April 21— Could this have happened anywhere else than in Kansas? In a discussion of the Anti-Screen Law recently passed by the Missouri legislature only two students out of twelve in a journalism class at the University of Kansas knew what a screen was. One of these is registered from Missouri. In another class of eleven senior men only two had ever been in a school.

"I believe this percentage is true of the other 1500 men students of the University," says Prof. Mark Thorpe of the department of journalism.
