Teachers' Club Banquet

About 22 members of the Albany Teachers' club met at the St. Francis hotel last evening and partook of a banquet. An enjoyable evening was spent, and some interesting talks were given.

Early Uses of Copper. Copper is not a metal of modern utilization. It was mined and manufactured in prehistoric times, when it was utilized as a material for the construction of utensils for domestic use and also for implements of war. It has been generally supposed that the use of copper preceded that of iron, but at present it is believed by students of the subject that iron was first subjected to human use. In many regions, however, where native copper appeared at the surface it is probable that it was worked before iron because of the comparative ease and simplicity of obtaining it, which involved no metallurgy. The Indians of the western United States were acquainted with copper. Many objects fashioned from it have been found in mounds. Indications of early working of the Lake Superior copper mines exist, while in Tennessee there are remains of prehistoric smelting plants. Copper was first mined in this country in Connecticut in 1708.—Engineering Magazine.

Gadsby Had Nothing to Say. "Henry," said Mrs. Gadsby, "a poor man came to the house this morning and asked me if I had any old clothes to give away, so I—" "Don't finish, don't finish!" shouted Mr. Gadsby. "I know exactly what you did. You went and gave away one of the best suits of clothes I had and probably a pair of shoes I could have worn for twelve months longer and a hat and there's no telling what else, all at a time when I can't afford to buy anything new." "Don't be so hasty," said Mrs. Gadsby. "If you had listened to me instead of interrupting you would have saved your breath and kept your temper. The man wanted something for his wife, who is a cripple, he said, and I gave him one of my old skirts that I used to cook in."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Working Up a Sable Pelt. "A fur dealer told me I wouldn't know a sable if I saw one," said a man who had been inquiring about pelts. "I thought, of course they'd be soft, fluffy little fellows, but he says they have a hide as flat as a rat's. He says that when the skins are taken from the animals they are so hard that they are placed in a tub and a barefooted man steps in and begins to tread on them to soften them. The tub is tilted so that at each step the man takes the skins slide down the slope and are kept moving. The man treads for hours and hours before any pelt appears. When it begins to rise the skins are oiled and the treading begins again. This is continued until the skins are as supple as chamois and the pelt has become so high that the fur has that soft depth and beautiful rich gloss for which it is prized."

The Ancient Greek. No greater gift could be made to our modern world than the rediscovery of the Greek physical supremacy. The secret of the method by which, for one brief period, they realized perfection was long since lost, no one knows how. At present so little do we understand the principles of training which guided the Greek in his games, in his battles and his dances, and made the proportions of his figure different from ours of today, that Greek sculpture is in reality a puzzle to us. Certain postures fixed by the Greek sculptor seem to us contortions, bordering on physical impossibilities. There is always a terrific controversy over the restoration of Greek sculpture, and even then the arms and heads and legs we supply never look right.—New York Times.

Old Cures. The antiquary took down a little gray book. "Here is a 'family doctor,'" he said. "that was published as far back as 1561. Talk about your quaint prescriptions!" The first prescription, a truly quaint one, ran: "If a man be greved wyth the fallinge sicknesse, let him take a he-wolves harte and make it to powder and use it; but if it be a woman, let her take a she-wolves harte." A 1561 jaundice cure was: "Take earthwormes and cut them small, and braye them wyth a little wyne so that ye may swallow it; drinke the same fasting." For toothache: "Seeth as many little frogges sitting upon trees as thou canst get, in water; take the fat flowynge from them, and when nede is, anoynt the teth therwyth."

The Bright Side. "What is your sorrowful about?" Brother Williams asked. "De harricane ain't blowed yo' roof tree down yit; de land is still here, an' yo' two foots is on it; yo' ain't too deaf ter hear de dinner bell, an' dar's plenty on de table. De only trouble is yo' is too ongrateful ter thank de Lawd fer what yo' got an' ax a blessin' over it!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Set No Bounds. We need not be afraid that we shall go too far in serving others. There is no danger that any of us will ever go far in the walk of active love. There is no likelihood that any of us will become too bountiful, too kind, too helpful to his neighbor.—J. C. Hare.

Let 'Er Shoot! "Allow me to introduce Mr. McKanthal, inventor of the letter chute." "Glad to know you. But why do you inventors spend all your genius inventing war engines?"—New York Mail.

Described. "What do they mean by the horns of dilemma?" "Two autos, I suppose, honking at you at once."—Kansas City Journal.

of their gratitude to her for her assistance with the school play. About twelve couples were present. The evening was spent in playing games. Saturday afternoon the Oakville high school baseball team journeyed to Shedd and defeated the Shedd team on their own grounds by a score of two to one. Shedd's lone run came in the last of the sixth, but the Oakville boys came back with their two runs in the first of the seventh, and so the score stood until the finish. The batteries were: Shedd, Stone and Forbes; Oakville, Waddell and Yetter. John Halverson of Shedd umpired the game, giving complete satisfaction to both sides. MADE HIMSELF SUCCESS BY SPENDING MONEY. Sedan, Kan., is just an ordinary country town of some 1500 people. But it has at least one real business man. His name is J. H. Edwards. And now listen: Edwards spends two thousand dollars with his local papers in advertising—every year. Has it paid him? Well, he went to Sedan a few years ago with but little capital. He now owns a magnificent store, a nice home and a big farm. "We value our advertising enough to make it a part of our assets," he says. "It is the live wire of any business, and a person can judge pretty well the amount of energy behind a business by the kind and amount of advertising that business is doing." When facts like the above spring up every now and then all over the United States, publishers cannot help wondering what it is that blinds the eye of the average man to his possibilities with printers' ink.
