GREAT DEEDS, FEW WORDS.

Brief Dispatches That Told of Famous Victories in War.
It is fitting that the great soldier, who should be a man of deeds rather than words, should set an example of terseness in his dispatches. Thus, after the capitulation of Prague, Suvaroff thus communicated the joyful news to his empress: "Hurrah! Prague!" To which Catherine, not to be outdone in brevity, answered, "Bravo. 'I marshal!"

That grim savior Robert b. de after gaining one of his famous victories over the French, sent the news in this concise and businesslike form: "Met with the French fleet; beat, killed, sunk and burned as per margin."

The Viconte de Turenne, marshal of France, was a man of equally few words, as he proved when, after his brilliant defeat of Conde at the Dunos in 1658, he announced his triumph in ten words, "The enemy came, was beaten; I am tired; good night!"

But the world's greatest generals have always been models of brevity as of modesty since the days of Caesar, whose "I came, I saw, I conquered," sent to his friend Amintus after the glorious victory over Pharnaces at Zela, is the most famous "dispatch" in the annals of war.—London Saturday Review.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN.

Differing Forms of Speech in Great Britain and This Country
The common objects and phenomena of nature are often differently named in English and American. Such Americanisms as creek and run for small streams are practically unknown in England, and the English moor is a stranger in the United States. The Englishman is naturally but little familiar with bayou, gulch, gully, canyon, butte, divide and bluff. He knows the meaning of sound (Long Island sound), but always uses channel in place of it.

In the same way the American knows the meaning of English bog, but almost always uses swamp or marsh (often called to ma'ah). Foot-hill is an Americanism; so is cold snap; so also are prairie, backwoods, flats and neck (in the sense of peninsula). The Englishman seldom if ever describes a severe storm as a hurricane, a cyclone, tornado or blizzard. He does not say that the temperature is 29 degrees or that the thermometer or the mercury is at 29 degrees, but that there are three degrees of frost. He calls ice water iced water.—Pittsburgh Press.
